3	3 going to get started. We have the guest of honor
4	4 with us. So, good morning, my name is Macarena
5	5 Saez, and I'm the director of the Center for
6	6 Human Rights and Humanitarian Law here at 7	7 American University Washington College of Law.
8	8 And along with my colleague, Fernando
9	9 LaGuarda, who's the director of the Law and
10	10 Government Program, we are really happy to
11	11 welcome you all here to this symposium called, A

13	13 Herman Schwartz to the Rule of Law.
14	14 It was not easy to decide what topics
15	15 we should cover for this symposium, because in
16	16 his written productive career as an attorney,
17	17 scholar, activist, and thinker, our colleague and
18	18 friend, Herman Schwartz, has had a tremendous
19	19 influence in many different areas of the law.
20	20 The topics we chose have been influenced by
21	21 Herman's writings and actions, and have had an

5 1 career, his law career, more than 30 years ago. 2 A couple of days ago, I had a 3 conversation with a colleague about what is 4 relevant in academia. And I was arguing that, in 5 my opinion, there are two distinctive types of 6 scholars, those who aspire to have a name among 7 their peers, and those who aspire to take the 8 conversation to the level of making a difference 9 in the real world. 10 I think few scholars are able to 11 achieve a level of success in either of those 12 camps, and even fewer become a name both for 13 their theoretical contributions, and their 14 influence in policies and protections of rights, 15 and Herman embodies that combination of scholar 16 and activist that is so difficult to find, and 17 that we should seek and encourage more. 18 I have no doubt that today's panels 19 will be full of productive and dynamic 20 conversations, and each panel will be a real mini 21 master class for all of us today, especially for 22 law students. I also hope that each panel will	7 1 I am especially grateful for all that you've 2 done, and all that your wonderful colleagues at 3 the Center for Human Rights and Humanitarian Law, 4 and also the Program on Law and Government, and 5 Fernando LaGuarda have done to bring us together 6 today as a community in celebration of our 7 beloved colleague. 8 And on behalf of American University 9 Washington College of Law, welcome to A Global 10 Lawyer, a Symposium Celebrating the Contributions 11 of Professor Herman Schwartz to the Rule of Law. 12 It is an honor to be part of this celebration of 13 our dear colleague, Professor Herman Schwartz, 14 and his formidable and ongoing legacy. And it is 15 a testament to that legacy that we have the 16 privilege of welcoming so many distinguished 17 guests to speak on a rich array of absolutely 18 critical topics. Topics that Herman has 19 championed his entire career. 20 Professor Schwartz has led in 21 championing what matters, which is the motto of 22 this great law school. I especially want to
6 1 inspire more young professionals to use their law 2 degrees to stop injustices, and strengthen the 3 rule of law in the United States and abroad. 4 One last thing I have to mention before 5 I give up to our Dean, Camille Nelson, to 6 officially open the symposium for us, is that 7 there is a poster board of the flyer that we did 8 for the symposium outside, and there are lots of 9 sharpies out there, so if you want to greet 10 Herman in that poster board, you can do so in 11 every of the breaks, and during the reception 12 today. 13 So, thank you again for being here, and 14 I want to invite in Camille Nelson to officially 15 open the symposium. Thank you. 16 MS. NELSON: Good morning everyone. 17 I'm going to try that again, if it -- we're 18 celebrating Herman, so good morning everyone. 19 AUDIENCE: Good morning. 20 MS. NELSON: Wonderful. Thank you, 21 Macarena. Thank you, Professor Saez, for that 22 very kind introduction, and for kicking us off.	8 1 recognize all of you who have taken the time to 2 be here with us today, and I want to underscore 3 the words of Maya Angelou, who once famously 4 said, "If you are going to live, leave a legacy. 5 Make a mark on the world that cannot be erased." 6 And I do believe that is what our dear 7 friend and beloved colleague has already done. 8 When we look back at what Professor Schwartz has 9 accomplished for this law school, for local 10 communities across the country, across the 11 nation, for individuals and organizations, 12 indeed, around the world, it is obvious that he 13 has left a lasting legacy. 14 One that cannot be erased. One marked 15 by his intellect, his compassion, his passion for 16 humanity, and his friendship, an enduring 17 friendship. For decades, Professor Schwartz has 18 been known as The Happy Warrior, for his work 19 done to advance civil rights, civil liberties, 20 and human rights here at home and around the 21 world. 22 These causes have been the focus of his

9 1 career as an attorney, as a teacher, as a 2 scholar, as an advisor, as an advocate, and as an 3 active participant in public debate. With great 4 efficacy and never-failing good humor, Professor 5 Schwartz's professional energies have been 6 devoted to battling discrimination and 7 oppression, while promoting social justice for 8 all. 9 Listing all of Professor Schwartz's 10 achievements would take more time than we have 11 today, tomorrow, the weekend, next week, going on 12 throughout October, so I'd like to take a moment 13 to just briefly underscore and highlight some of 14 his remarkable achievements, and quite frankly, 15 iconic moments that have shaped his incredible 16 legacy. 17 In the early 1970s, he conceived the 18 idea of a Law Teachers Association that became, 19 under the leadership of Professor Norman Dorsen 20 of NYU, The Society of American Law Teachers. An 21 organization that endures today, and an 22 organization, a progressive organization, that	11 1 Further, Professor Schwartz has 2 litigated major constitutional cases, and was 3 counsel in well over 100 cases. Herman's work as 4 the American Civil Liberties Union expert on 5 electronic surveillance produced pathbreaking 6 studies on the use and effectiveness of 7 wiretapping and bugging, particularly related to 8 the use of the Crime Control and Safe Streets Act 9 of 1968. 10 Professor Herman Schwartz, on behalf of 11 American University Washington College of Law, 12 this wonderful community, we cannot thank you 13 enough for your myriad, exceptional, 14 extraordinary contributions. 15 I, and I know we all are, frankly, in 16 awe of all you have achieved, and remain truly 17 grateful for these accomplishments, and for your 18 ongoing commitment to educating our students, and 19 representing the law school exceptionally over 20 many, many decades. Your footprint is 21 tremendous. 22 Once again, to all of you here today,
10 1 many of us in this room, and outside of this 2 room, have been a part of, and I see many of you 3 in this room. 4 In 1984, Herman established the 5 groundbreaking Herman Schwartz Israel Human 6 Rights Law Fellowship Program, formerly known as 7 the U.S. Israel Civil Liberties Law Fellows 8 Program, giving Israeli lawyers an opportunity to 9 learn how to promote and protect human rights 10 through litigation, and teaching additional forms 11 of advocacy. 12 And for more than 30 years, these 13 Fellows have shaped legislation, they have shaped 14 policy, they have shaped practice in diverse 15 areas of Israeli life, and have also influenced 16 legal education in Israel. 17 In addition, in 1990, Professor 18 Schwartz cofounded the Center for Human Rights 19 and Humanitarian Law, which became a world- 20 renowned program to provide exceptional 21 scholarship strategy and support for human rights 22 initiatives around the globe.	12 1 and to those who will join us throughout the day, 2 it is my great honor to welcome you all to WCL 3 and to today's symposium. I know you will enjoy 4 a tremendous experience, and we look forward to 5 this continuing conversation in the decades to 6 come. Thank you for being here, and welcome. 7 PROFESSOR SAEZ: So, I'd like to invite 8 the speakers for our first panel to come to the 9 table, and so we can start our first panel on 10 prison rights. One reminder to all the speakers, 11 if to please, if you can speak to the mic, 12 because this is being live streamed, and for 13 audiences outside the United States as well. 14 Thank you. 15 MR. MENDEZ: Good morning. 16 PROFESSOR SAEZ: Good morning. 17 PANEL 1 18 PRISON REFORM IN THE UNITED STATES AND ABROAD 19 MR. MENDEZ: Good morning. Ah, there 20 we go. It's a real -- I'm Juan Mendez, I teach 21 international law and human rights law here in 22 WCL, and it's a real honor and a privilege to be

13 1 invited by the Center for Human Rights and 2 Humanitarian Law, and the Program of Law and 3 Government, to moderate this panel today, 4 especially as it is intended to be a tribute to 5 our colleague and friend, Herman Schwartz. 6 And I especially appreciate that we see 7 amongst you many people who have worked with 8 Herman in so many different areas, and 9 particularly people who I met through Herman, or 10 actually who I met Herman through, some of you. 11 It's a really very interesting and 12 happy occasion, I believe, to do this tribute to 13 Herman. And not only has he been a wonderful 14 colleague here at WCL, but when I was at Human 15 Rights Watch, he helped us form and shape our 16 prison project, and later I had the good fortune 17 of sharing with him work at the Board of the Open 18 Society Justice Initiative for several years. 19 As you know, this is a panel on prison 20 reform, and many of you know that I have some 21 very personal reasons for being interested in 22 prisons, and -- but it's good to be at WCL,	15 1 prisons. 2 I also had the occasion, with others, 3 of participating in some international law 4 standard setting that resulted in the now called 5 Nelson Mandela Rules, approved in 2015, that is a 6 new name of the UN standard minimum rules on 7 prisoners. 8 So, as you see, I've been an aficionado 9 of prison reform, but I also feel it is a 10 privilege to be able to moderate a panel of real 11 experts on prison reform, that we are going to 12 hear in a few minutes. And you have the 13 biographies, so I'll introduce them in the order 14 in which I -- we've decided that they will speak. 15 And Professor William Hellerstein, who 16 was a professor of law emeritus at Brooklyn Law 17 School, will talk to us about his experiences 18 with Herman in the seminal case of the Attica 19 Prison in upstate New York. And I think you know 20 what came out of that, and for many years has 21 represented an important career in -- on prison 22 reform.
14 1 working on these issues, because there's so much 2 talent, beginning and not ending with Herman, 3 dealing with prison reform in the United States 4 and abroad. 5 I think that WCL has become a real 6 focal point for advocacy around these issues, and 7 I'd like just to remember that just last night, 8 the Center for Human Rights and Humanitarian Law, 9 and the Academy of Human Rights co-sponsored a 10 panel on the real dire conditions of prisons in 11 Brazil, under President Jair Bolsonaro. 12 So, I want to say also that I have in 13 my recent term as the special rapporteur for the 14 United Nations on torture, I had occasion to 15 learn, again, about prison conditions and prison 16 reform around the world, and particularly in the 17 United States. 18 I had lots of approaches by NGOs, and 19 even by families of inmates around the country, 20 and I paid particular attention to issues like 21 solitary confinement, and the extensive use and 22 abuse of solitary confinement in United States	16 1 Professor Hellerstein is the author of 2 numerous articles on criminal law and prisoners' 3 rights, including prison conditions in Jamaica, a 4 study that he wrote for Human Rights Watch. 5 After Professor Hellerstein, our own 6 Professor Brenda Smith, who is a Senior Associate 7 Dean here at the Washington College of Law, will 8 follow. I want to focus, particularly, on the 9 fact that she is a director of the project on 10 addressing prison rape, and in that same vein, 11 she was appointed by, at that time minority 12 leader, Nancy Pelosi to be a member of the 13 National Prison Rape Elimination Commission. 14 And then, in third place, Professor 15 Deborah LaBelle, is going to speak to us. She is 16 a member of the ACLU of Michigan, and a very 17 active advocate and lawyer, who even yesterday 18 argued a case in court on these issues. 19 She is a director of the Juvenile Life 20 Without Parole Initiative at the ACLU of 21 Michigan, and the author of Basic Decency, 22 Protecting the Human Rights of Children, and of

17 1 Ensuring Rights for All, Realizing Human Rights 2 for Prisoners in Bringing Human Rights Home. With 3 that, I will ask Professor Hellerstein to begin. 4 PROFESSOR HELLERSTEIN: I am deeply 5 honored, and is a great pleasure to be here. 6 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Can you key your 7 mic? 8 MR. MENDEZ: Press the button. 9 PROFESSOR HELLERSTEIN: Oh. I'm very 10 honored, and it's a great pleasure to be here, to 11 speak about my dearest friend and comrade in 12 arms, Herman. I would say that the title, if I 13 had to give a title to my talk, would be Herman 14 Schwartz, Scholar Pioneer of Prisoners' Rights. 15 How does one measure the impact of a 16 single person on a revolution? And it is a 17 revolution of sorts. Herman Schwartz was a 18 pioneer in the earliest days, and we have known 19 each other for over 50 years as a result. He was 20 one of the early few who engaged in prisoners' 21 rights in the state of New York, when nobody was 22 doing it, and even before the Attica uprising of	19 1 contacted the Deputy Commissioner of New York 2 State Corrections, Walter Dunbar, offering his 3 services. They were not immediately received. 4 He also left a business card with Commissioner 5 Oswald, saying that, if he can be of any help. 6 Commissioner Oswald, knowing Herman to 7 be a person of talent and commitment, eventually 8 decided to let Herman actually participate in the 9 early days, by transmitting the requests of the 10 prisoners. He also was eventually on the panel of 11 a very large panel, having negotiations with the 12 inmates, but that all came to a tragic end when 13 Governor Rockefeller decided it was time to do 14 some shooting. 15 On the morning of the 13th, I was 16 sitting in my office, hearing that after retaking 17 of the prison was ongoing, and I decided since so 18 many of the people at Attica are appellate 19 clients, whose briefs on appeal we were writing, 20 that there was certainly going to be brutality, 21 and God knows what. 22 And so, I dragooned a couple of my
18 1 September 1971, he was already representing 2 inmates around the state, and arguing cases. 3 He also was developing a project at the 4 NYCLU, on prisoners' rights. At the same time, 5 another wonderful lawyer named Phil Hershop 6 (phonetic) in Virginia, was doing the same for 7 prisoners, and I think when Aryeh Neier became 8 head of the ACLU, the National Prison Project was 9 born in 1972, the merger of Herman's New York 10 work, and Phil's work in Virginia. And what the 11 work of the National Prison Project of the ACLU 12 has been, is monumental. 13 The year before that National Prison 14 Project was established, I had the idea in New 15 York. I was that time head of the Criminal 16 Appeals Bureau for the Legal Aid Society of New 17 York, and sought funding for our own prisoners' 18 rights project. The funding came from the 19 federal government, and it became effective 20 September 1, 1971, just a few days before Attica. 21 When Attica broke out on September 9, 22 Herman heard it on the radio, and he immediately	20 1 young lawyers, and hopped on a plane to Buffalo, 2 and went to the Buffalo Law School, where I met 3 Herman. And we were trying to figure out what to 4 do. How do you get into a prison that's under 5 siege, where there's been, obviously, a lot of 6 bad things going on? 7 And we decided to, in Herman's house, 8 to seek a preliminary injunction or a restraining 9 order from Judge Curtin, a federal judge whom 10 Herman knew well. So, we went, as I remember, at 11 midnight to Judge Curtin's house. He even opened 12 a six pack and said, what's your case? 13 Well, we hadn't been able to talk to 14 any inmates, so what our case was, was in what we 15 thought was happening. Curtin ordered us into 16 the prison, and so I, with a bunch of hippie 17 doctors and my lawyers, headed for the prison on 18 a rainy morning, got to the prison door with the 19 Judge's order having -- because he'd called ahead 20 to the prison, but they wouldn't let us in. 21 I called Judge Curtin at home, at about 22 5:00 a.m. in the morning, and there were no cell

21 1 phones then, I was standing in a booth, and he 2 was very upset, but he said there was nothing he 3 could do, we would assemble in the morning, in 4 his courtroom, and see where things were. We 5 could not make the case that morning. 6 Couple of days later, one of the 7 national guardsmen who took part in retaking, 8 came forward with horrendous stories. And so, 9 he, Judge Curtin, reopened the hearing, and 10 Herman and I, and other lawyers, conducted a full 11 evidentiary hearing into brutality, and other 12 acts, interrogations, what have you. 13 After several days of testimony, Judge 14 Curtin ruled against us in a very extensive 15 opinion, essentially saying we had proved our 16 case, but that it was over, and that they weren't 17 doing it anymore. We were not happy with that. 18 I took -- we took an appeal to the 19 Second Circuit, and -- which I argued, and the 20 Circuit reversed Judge Curtin, holding that even 21 though it was over, an injunction should issue 22 against brutality and other acts of cruelty,	23 1 that, Herman continued his work in prisoners' 2 rights, and we remained in touch. How do you 3 figure what Herman's work contributed to? 4 Well, those were amazing years, and 5 Herman, as has already been mentioned, had argued 6 several cases in the Supreme Court, involving 7 prisoners' rights, and the revolution began. I 8 thought I would just take a few minutes to 9 encapsulate 50 years of Supreme Court movement, 10 to lay a foundation. 11 As you recall, the Warren Court was a 12 great court, from my perspective. It created a 13 criminal procedure revolution, recognizing the 14 rights of criminal defendants, but it didn't do 15 much. It wasn't asked to do much in prisoners' 16 rights, because it was early. 17 It held a ruling involving racist 18 segregation, and outlawed it, and access to the 19 court case. In fact, I remember one of my own 20 students, in his evaluation, said, someone should 21 tell Professor Hellerstein, Earl Warren is dead. 22 Well, yeah, he is, but he lives in my heart.
22 1 which was sort of a landmark ruling, because you 2 don't usually get an injunction for something the 3 court says is already over. 4 And that's where Herman's friendship 5 and our life in prisoners' rights struggle began. 6 Herman's work, as I said, had begun earlier. He 7 had already won a Second Circuit case with regard 8 to medical care in prison, so he was becoming 9 quite the man about town in prisoners' rights. 10 So much so that in 1975, Governor Hugh 11 Carey nominated him to be chairman of the State 12 Corrections Commission, which is an oversight 13 board. Well, that made the sheriffs and other 14 law enforcement officials very unhappy, because 15 he wasn't just a member of the board, he was 16 chairman, and I think Hugh Carey knew, and the 17 sheriffs knew that Herman doesn't just hang 18 around when he does something, so he didn't make 19 it out of the Senate. 20 And I remember he told me that when we 21 were in Aruba, my wife and I, you know, it was a 22 very bad piece of news. So, not having done	24 1 Anyway, the Burger Court began on 2 October 1969, before Attica. We all know what 3 the Burger Court meant for prisoners' rights. 4 Warren Burger was conservative, as you know, it 5 was Nixon's appointment and his attack on the 6 Warren Court. The early years of the Burger 7 Court were promising. 8 They came down with decisions of 9 increasing prisoner access to the courts, some 10 modicum of protections with regard to not having 11 to exhaust state and administrative remedies to 12 bring suits under the Federal Civil Rights Act. 13 And so, we were getting pretty excited that there 14 was something going on. 15 Also, the Chief Justice had also 16 written an article in the American Bar 17 Association Journal, talking about the bad state 18 of prisons and the need for -- so, we thought 19 that was a new constitution, his article, when he 20 gave it in the journal. 21 So, we didn't know what to make of it, 22 but we kept litigating, and we had a few good

25 1 years. I think -- I've tried to figure out why 2 the Burger Court was beginning to pay attention 3 to the claims of prisoners. I think Attica had 4 something very central to do with it, because of 5 what the Attica retaking exposed, both the 6 cruelty of the retaking itself, and of the 7 conditions that the inmates at Attica were 8 contesting, and seeking remedies for. 9       However, the silk purse was turning 10 into a, sort of, a sow's ear, because starting 11 out 1975, there was a push back in the Burger 12 Court, and they were beginning to pull back on 13 prison disciplinary matters, with regard to 14 whether you transfer somebody from a medium back 15 to a maximum, which is a big difference in a 16 prisoner's life, what kind of due process should 17 you get. 18       If he's been falsely accused of say, 19 being a prison union leader, should he have a 20 hearing? And the court still held, no, that 21 transfer from one to the other should be left to 22 the discretion of the prison system. So, things	27 1 little better than some of the motels that I've 2 been in in my life, in the 60s. 3       Anyway, the case got to the Supreme 4 Court, and the court really -- we've -- you know, 5 it was a landmark against condition litigation, 6 but it didn't turn out that way, because the 7 distinctual, in my mind, because the MCC, then, 8 was a new facility. It's not so new now, and 9 it's got lots of problems, but. 10       So, the Burger Court did not close off 11 spigot for prison conditions litigation in places 12 where things were pretty bad, so I would 13 characterize the Burger Court years as, the good, 14 the bad, and not all that ugly. 15       Ugly came with William H. Rehnquist. 16 That was ugly. But we knew that when he was 17 Associate Justice, because he never met a 18 prison -- prisoners' right that didn't exist. 19 Now, as Chief Justice, with the change in the 20 court's composition, and as the, you know, the 21 ascension of Antonin Scalia, a dynamic duo in the 22 opposite way, the Rehnquist Court set out really,
26 1 were turning a little sour. 2       In 1979, in a case that I'm responsible 3 for, and I am not proud about it, the Bell v. 4 Wolfish, the court seemed to lay down a major 5 setback in with regard to the total conditions of 6 the prison. 7       Now, I am responsible for, because it 8 was our office, and we won in the District Court, 9 and won in the Circuit Court. They found that 10 the conditions, guess where, in the MCC, the 11 Manhattan Correctional facility, which Aaron Lee 12 Epstein just decided to off himself. 13       But this is was a very new prison back 14 in 1975, when we brought the case, and I should 15 say brought is not the right word, I didn't bring 16 it. The judge called me on the phone at our 17 Christmas party and said, Rabbi Wolfish is 18 complaining about treatment in the MCC, and he's 19 filed a complaint, and I want you to do the case. 20       And I knew then, if we won the case, it 21 would go to the Supreme Court, and they would 22 say, uh-uh-uh. These inmates are staying a	28 1 to turn things back with regards to freedom of 2 speech and religion, due process for prisoners, 3 access to the courts, and prison conditions. 4       So, case after case took a negative 5 turn. Justice Scalia, in Lewis v. Casey said, 6 what? The Burger Court's decision on law 7 libraries for inmates; hmm. No inmate has a 8 right to a law library. If he has no access to 9 books, he has to show a definite injury by not 10 having access to books. Now, I don't know how 11 you'd do that. 12       What got worse, with regard to prison 13 conditions, is the court now said, even in a 14 conditions case, which is a systemic situation, 15 not just one person, you have to meet the 16 standard of deliberate indifference. Well, how 17 do you meet the standard of deliberate 18 indifference, if the state hasn't funded the 19 entire prison to take care of medical care, 20 health, of all kinds of things? How do you prove 21 that? 22       Many of the prison officials I have

1 litigated with said, we're glad you're suing us,
2 because if you win, the state will have to fund
3 us. Now, the Supreme Court's saying, well, you 4 still have to prove deliberate indifference.
5 That was a very turn -- a bad turn of events.
6 So, in a nutshell, prisoners' rights 7 took a considerable step backward, thanks to the 8 Rehnquist Court. In 1996, Congress helped out
9 greatly with the Prison Litigation Reform Act, 10 which made it even more difficult to litigate
11 cases on behalf of prisoners. Signed by none
12 other than William Clinton, as President.
13 My students, you know, they loved
14 Clinton. I never understood why he signed, you 15 know, the act that curtailed habeas corpus. Left 16 you -- I even have this argument with my wife, 17 and the women -- and women and Bill Clinton are 18 very interesting. I didn't see it, for the 19 things I believed in.
20 Got to leave those to Walter Roberts
21 Court, where we sit now. Well, thankfully they 22 haven't done all that much bad. They haven't

30

1 nearly -- he did something very, very good. Of 2 course, it was Justice Kennedy wrote the 5/4
3 decision, in the case called Brown v. Plata.
4 They affirmed both court rulings,
5 requiring the release of prison populations in 6 the State of California, because the conditions 7 in the entire state were unconstitutional, as 8 found by the courts, causing tremendous harm to 9 inmates' health, mental well-being, et cetera.
10 And that sort of stands like a flag.
11 We don't know what the Roberts Court is going to 12 do if it gets its hands on more cases. I would 13 not bet the farm that the results would be good.
14 So, that's the prisoners' rights revolution, in 15 a constitutional sense, in a nutshell.
16 What has it all meant? Herman was a 17 pioneer, and so, was there something that was 18 pioneered? Yes. And I've got friends in the 19 movement who are not happy, they're very 20 negative, very nihilistic. It's, you know, it's 21 all turned against us. Prisoners are not going 22 to get what they should be getting under the 31

1 Constitution. I don't share that view.
2 I would like things to have been better
3 juridically, but I think my feeling, my takeaway,
4 is it is far different than when Herman and I 5 started, in a number of ways. First of all, it's 6 part of our conversation nationally, there is 7 still substantial law, and the lower courts, 8 federal and state, have shown a willingness to 9 intervene, despite the tide of the law turning.
10 I also think within the prison systems 11 themselves, as a result of this revolution, which 12 probably is an anti-revolution juridically, 13 corrections in so many places are more 14 professional. You could even say they're 15 bureaucratic.
16 But there's a different dialogue going 17 on. The kinds of things -- you know, we've come 18 a long way from, the prisoner as a slave of the 19 state, that the Virginia Supreme Court said in 20 Ruffin v. Commonwealth. We've come a long way.
21 Have we arrived at where we would like 22 to be, at least normalitively? No. But has it

32

1 been a waste of our efforts? No. My love for 2 Herman, my respect for Herman comes from the days
3 when he was walking around with Ed Corrin, he had 4 law students fighting these fights.
5 We joined up together, and I'd like to 6 look back on our professional lives together, and 7 all the people who joined on, in ACLU, and all 8 the lawyers and social reformers out there that 9 know it has not been a waste of our time. We 10 have done things, and there are things yet to be 11 done.
12 The entire conversation in criminal 13 justice is changing. The sensitivity of the 14 courts themselves to evolve through convictions, 15 is part of the picture. That can't be separated 16 from the prisoners' rights revolution. It is a 17 far different world than the one that I looked at 18 coming out of law school in 1962, and existed
19 when Herman and I began our work together in '71.
20 So, I am grateful for that. I am
21 grateful that I have the honor, and the distinct 22 pleasure of working with one of the greatest 33

1 scholar pioneers that this country has ever seen.
2 MR. MENDEZ: Thank you, Professor
3 Hellerstein, and I've been told that we can 4 extend this panel a little beyond what the agenda 5 shows, and the coffee break will be moved to 6 10:45 a.m. So, I'm hoping we'll have quite a bit 7 of time for questions and answers.
8 I especially like the upbeat tone of 9 the last remarks by Professor Hellerstein,
10 because it gives us and the younger generations a 11 hope that there's a lot of work to be done, but 12 there's a will to do it. So, now I turn to 13 Professor Brenda Smith for her presentation.
14 PROFESSOR SMITH: Thank you. So, I'm 15 actually going to claim the part of the younger 16 generation, so I'll claim it. I'm honored to 17 have been invited to speak at this symposium on 18 Herman's contributions on the treatment of 19 prisoners.
20 I'd like to say first, that I actually 21 started my work on prisons at a women's rights 22 organization, the National Women's Law Center.

1 While at the law center, I worked closely with 2 the National Prison Project that Herman founded.
3 I think it's fair to say that when I
4 was at the National Women's Law Center, having 5 come from the DC Public Defenders Service, I was 6 looking for some way to connect the work that I
7 had done on behalf of prisoners at the DC Public
8 Defenders Service, to what was going on from a, I 9 guess, policy level, to the work that was going 10 on behalf of women.
11 I sought to use the tools that the 12 Center, and those tools that the National Prison 13 Project had developed, to ensure equality and 14 safety for, particularly, disenfranchised group 15 of women; women in prisons and jails.
16 When I arrived at the National Women's 17 Law Center from the DC Public Defenders Service, 18 I was surprised that the center had actually not 19 staked out a position on women in prison, and in 20 fact, I remember actually convincing Marsha
21 Greenberger and Duffy Campbell that my trips out
22 to the Lorton Minimum Security Annex were really

1 not about prisons, but really to try to translate 2 all of the work that we were doing on behalf of 3 women in the community, to this particular group 4 of women.
5 And I think, as many of you know,
6 whenever you go into a prison, you are 7 transformed. And I have to say, when I went into 8 the Lorton Minimum Security Women's Prison, I was 9 transformed. So, what I found there, was I found 10 women who were actually living in what had been 11 an army barracks, unclassified, with actually no
12 access to legal services, because very few people 13 came out to Lorton to work with the women, they 14 actually came out to talk to the men who were at 15 all of the other facilities.
16 Women did not have access to the same 17 kinds of educational programs, while men could 18 get a college degree, and participate in any 19 number of apprenticeship programs. Women could 20 barely get a GED, and the work that they were 21 permitted to do, was cleaning up the prison, and 22 sewing uniforms for the men's industries.

1 They had few visits. Most people went
2 to visit the men, and many of these women lost 3 custody of their children while they were in 4 custody. During the time that I was working at 5 the prison, I, again, talking about 6 transformation, a woman came to me and asked if I
7 could assist her in obtaining a termination of a 8 pregnancy.
9 She had actually been incarcerated at 10 the Minimum Security Annex for well over two 11 years, and so she conceived while she was in 12 custody, and again, part of that transformation.
13 So, let's move it back to where I was 14 working, which was at the National Women's Law 15 Center. And so, the work that I did in order to 16 address the situation that I found in that 17 prison, had to be framed in ways that were 18 congruent with the Center's equality lens.
19 And so, looking at Title IX, around 20 access to educational and vocational 21 opportunities, the 14th Amendment, equal 22 protection, Title VII. And so, as a very young

37 1 lawyer, 29, I wasn't sure that that lens fit, but 2 I have to say that it actually built on a long 3 discourse of early feminists who challenged the 4 treatment of women in custody, their conditions 5 in confinement, the inequality for women -- of 6 women's prisons, and the treatment of women 7 workers, the length of access to appropriate 8 services and opportunities, and the victimization 9 and exploitation of girls and women in custody, 10 by male staff. 11 Going back to New York, actually, in 12 fact the first women -- the first prisons for 13 women in New York were created because of the 14 beating death of a woman called Rachel Wealth -- 15 Welch, in 1825. She was a pregnant woman, who 16 had conceived while she was in custody. 17 Rachel Welch's death led to separate 18 prisons run by female matrons, but still baked 19 inequality into the prison system for women, 20 where the early matrons were primarily female, 21 but control of women's prisons still rested 22 primarily with male legislators, wardens, and	39 1 that men have access to programs and services 2 that can often reduce their time in custody, and 3 improve their opportunities once released. On 4 the other hand, women still, by and large, are 5 undereducated and under occupied while they are 6 in custody. 7 This inequality has serious 8 consequences. Longer time, and I argue, 9 increased vulnerability to exploitation and 10 victimization. As a result, women endure 11 unconstitutional conditions of confinement that 12 include trading sex for sanitary supplies, being 13 observed and searched by male officers, still 14 conceiving in custody and delivering in shackles. 15 These are facts for women in custody 16 that required federal legislation to resolve. 17 So, in 2019, not in 1969, '79, '89, or 1999, 18 2019, the First Step Act passed, ending the 19 shackling of pregnant women in federal prisons, 20 and requiring the provision of sanitary supplies, 21 again, in federal prisons, not in state and local 22 prisons.
38 1 governors. 2 That reality continues today. Because 3 the 14th Amendment, equal protection doctrine, 4 that looks at whether men and women are similarly 5 situated, women can, and still do, receive less 6 and different educational, vocational, work, and 7 institutional opportunities than male prisoners, 8 because of their smaller population numbers, 9 their gender, and their perceived preferences 10 viewed through the lens of domesticity. 11 So, while men receive college degrees, 12 in still poor facilities, women still can barely 13 get a GED while in custody, but they can receive 14 parenting programs, and programs that teach them 15 to sew and cook, still. 16 So, while still in facilities that are 17 dangerous, and dirty, and constitutionally 18 deficient, men do have some access to 19 apprenticeships and work opportunities in and 20 outside of prison, because of these perceived 21 differences between them and women. 22 What this does mean, in practice, is	40 1 And in fact, in Tuckwiller (phonetic), 2 which was actually sort of the space for Dothard 3 v. Rawlinson, which allowed women to supervise 4 men in custody. Providing sanitary supplies was 5 actually a piece of a settlement that was reached 6 in the last three years, so again, talking about 7 how inequality breeds poor conditions for women 8 in custody. 9 Promising work in this space, has been 10 the abundance of litigation, some of which I and 11 my co-panelists, Deb LaBelle, participated in. 12 Both damages and injunctive relief cases, 13 including Women Prisoners v. DC, a decades long 14 piece of litigation I was involved in on behalf 15 of 700 or so DC women prisoners, which addressed 16 sexual abuse in custody, education, medical care, 17 work, and vocational opportunities. 18 I also shout out the work of Deb in 19 Glover v. Johnson. A case -- a damages case, 20 where Deb achieved a $100 million damage award on 21 behalf of women in Michigan's prisons, for 22 similar content that I sued about in DC.

41 1 I think also, what Deb is going to talk 2 about, which I also found really important, and 3 also, I think that Juan, you've been such a 4 leader in this area, is the use of human rights 5 bodies, shining a light on this treatment in the 6 U.S., which is supposed to be a beacon of 7 progressive values, or at least it used to be, 8 right? 9 And this work before the American -- 10 before the Inter-American Commission on Human 11 Rights, and the UN Committee Against Torture, to 12 name and shame with regard to the sexual abuse of 13 women in custody, the shackling of women during 14 labor and delivery. 15 I also think that the passage of the 16 Prison Rape Elimination Act, which created a 17 national set of standards, data collection, and 18 gave life to movements that had been long 19 stymied, including the idea of ongoing oversight, 20 which Professor Hellerstein talked about, of 21 custodial institutions, federal engagement, 22 ensuring minimum standards for the treatment of	43 1 MR. MENDEZ: Thank you very much, 2 Professor Smith. And now, we turn to Attorney 3 Deborah LaBelle. 4 PROFESSOR LABELLE: Before I start, I 5 actually have to exorcise a really bad flashback 6 that Professor Hellerstein evoked in me, and it 7 was arguing one of my early cases in front of the 8 U.S. Supreme Court, where Justice Rehnquist was 9 chief, and in response to an inquiry, unused, 10 about the PLRA, and the low cost of compensation 11 for attorneys to do these cases, which was part 12 of the desire to turn off the spigot of advocates 13 working on this. 14 I mused that I simply didn't understand 15 why the Court would not want to compensate people 16 who were defending the U.S. Constitution for 17 incarcerated citizens less than corporate 18 raiders, at which point Justice Rehnquist got up 19 and left the bench, which was apparently somewhat 20 unheard-of, for my smart ass remark, apparently. 21 And though later they said he was having back 22 problems, but that evoked that memory. In future
42 1 people in state facilities, standards, and also 2 raising the age of criminal culpability, and 3 efforts to remove youth from adult prisons and 4 jails is, again, something that's very promising, 5 but is something that we will continue to have to 6 fight for. 7 I also think that another important 8 outcome of Herman's work, has been the expansion 9 of the idea of vulnerability, to include not just 10 women, but also men, boys, and sexual minorities. 11 I also think that the work that we need 12 to do as well, is to rethink the ideas about 13 predation and power, and the role that custodial 14 settings, whether they are transport, prison, 15 jail, immigration detention facilities, and 16 military play in seeding that vulnerability. 17 So, finally, I thank you, Herman, for 18 much of the institution building, for the theory 19 creating that you started and that you are 20 continuing to inspire in this area, and I am 21 grateful, as well as I know other panelists are 22 for your significant contributions in this area.	44 1 appearances, I was a little more discreet and 2 thoughtful. 3 But I really do want to thank American 4 University for -- actually, I feel it's a great 5 honor to say, and that I'm on this panel, to 6 recognize some of my work, in trying to integrate 7 reform on behalf -- in prisons, and human rights 8 work is fulfilling any of the legacy, the great 9 legacy and footsteps of the person we're here to 10 honor. 11 And I'm touched by it. And I hope my 12 work does a little bit of credit to his amazing 13 legacy, which we all, in the advocacy community, 14 rely on constantly to this day. I was going to 15 give a little more academic talk, but then 16 yesterday, as Juan mentioned, I was in court, 17 arguing a case on -- and part of the case that's 18 heading to trial, the class of youth, young boys, 19 in adult prisons, subject to solitary confinement 20 and sexual abuse. 21 And so, the issue that we were talking 22 about, was that the State of Michigan had filed a

45 1 motion in limine, trying to preclude us from 2 using the word children in the trial, and that we 3 couldn't mention the word children, because they 4 were tried as adults, or they were convicts, or 5 there were inmates, or they were prisoners, and 6 they actually moved to forbid us from using the 7 word child. 8 And it brought back the whole reason 9 that some of this work is crucial to use a human 10 rights lens. So, the language is important. And 11 so, we're talking about the, you know, the ICCQI, 12 were talking about, you know, the convention and 13 the rights of the children, we're talking about 14 the Mandela rules, we're talking about that these 15 are children. 16 And in fact, the whole case centers on 17 the failure of the State to recognize their 18 status as children, and to treat them in 19 accordance with that status. And, you know, we 20 are now -- we morphed into a deep human rights 21 argument in front of a state court judge. 22 And part of us -- I mean, what's so	47 1 about prisoner rights, we've already diminished 2 it just by that phraseology, prisoner rights. 3 No, we're talking about the human 4 rights of people wherever they may be. They may 5 be in immigration detention, they may be in 6 prisons, they may be in jails, they may be in 7 lockups, they may be in universities. Wherever 8 they are, you cannot diminish and degrade them by 9 the phraseology of making their status lesser 10 than human. 11 And so, not only does it matter in the 12 courts, but it matters to my clients. When -- 13 you can talk due process, you can talk all sorts 14 of things, but it doesn't resonate in a way that 15 when you're talking to people who are deeply 16 marginalized, and in quiet prisons where bad 17 things happen, because bad things always happen 18 when you do it behind closed places, where no one 19 sees them, and you do it to people who you view 20 of shame that are unworthy. 21 And so, you don't have a great group 22 coming forward to defend. That's where really
46 1 important about the value of incorporating 2 international law treaties, and documents in our 3 domestic work, and those of us who work on prison 4 reform, and on behalf of people who have been 5 marginalized, we're often advocating legal 6 positions that stand on the fine edge of danger in 7 the first place. 8 And so, sometimes when we say, well, 9 how can you even argue more tenuous law and 10 application of human rights law, when you barely 11 have a constitutional basis to argue this, and 12 the point, in some ways, is, exactly. 13 That part of it is, but part of it is 14 about the value added by documentation, by 15 language, by remedies, and by reminding courts 16 and judges about the inherent dignity of people 17 based upon their humanity. 18 Their human status, not where they're 19 at, not who they are, but except for their 20 humanity and their human status. And it 21 especially matters, the language, not just in 22 courts, because we don't talk about -- if we talk	48 1 bad things always happen. And so, for them to 2 say, no, I have an inherent right to dignity 3 because of my human status, that is a powerful 4 tool of hope inside. It's deeply powerful. 5 The Mandela rules, which I always send 6 in to the people I represent. It's to say, no, 7 there are standards here that are being breached. 8 There are people around the world who recognize 9 you have certain rights. 10 And one of the -- I do want to talk 11 about how, a very positive thing, about how 12 important human rights work, and framing it in 13 this way, in the context of people in detention 14 has been -- actually, I want to tell an amazing 15 success story here, because I think if we're 16 going to move forward on this, that it has to be 17 an essential component of what we do. 18 And the -- I want to talk about youth 19 in detention, which has to be -- children in 20 detention has to be the most diminished in terms 21 of rights. First, we don't have rights for 22 children. You know, we haven't -- in our

49 1 domestic -- children don't have rights. I mean, 2 we don't have a body of law for them. 3 We have in divorce proceedings certain 4 things about what's in their best interest and 5 that, but we do not have a body of law for 6 children's rights. And if you put children in 7 detention, and treat them as adults, which is 8 this bizarre transmogrification that they want to 9 do to children, you know. 10 I mean, the supreme court even refused 11 to do that in the Humvee cases, saying, you can't 12 take someone who is a U.S. citizen, and just by 13 their acts, transform them into a foreign 14 terrorist that doesn't have rights in the United 15 States. 16 They said, no, they're still a U.S. 17 citizen, whatever they did. But for children, 18 whatever they do, the courts want to transform 19 them into adults, by what they did, which of 20 course is deeply disturbing, and what has been 21 the feeder program for our prisons in this 22 country, where I think everyone knows where 25	51 1 Court to recognize that they were children. 2 Children, children, children. 3 And we would follow it by a human 4 rights framework. And so, we took this on. 5 First, we went to ACLU, Human Rights Watch, and 6 Amnesty, who for the first time that a giant 7 documentation report. They usually fund each 8 other a little bit for funding. 9 But they got together, and they did The 10 Rest of Our Lives, which was a documentation 11 report on children serving life without 12 possibility of parole in American prisons. And 13 no other country had been doing it at that time, 14 except Somalia, and they really didn't have a 15 government to get rid of it, but so -- you know, 16 we were incredibly exceptional. 17 So, we said, okay, first we had the 18 documentation. Thousands of children, because no 19 one had ever documented this before. And then, 20 we went to the international bodies. We went 21 to -- you know, we started engaging the 22 International Covenant on Civil and Political
50 1 percent of the population of prisons, although 5 2 percent of the world's population. 3 We keep feeding them in, and the feeder 4 are children. Young children, and mostly 5 children of color. So, what -- they're the most 6 deeply impacted, and the least able to reach out. 7 They don't have attorneys, they don't have 8 resources, their families are often not in a 9 situation to reach out. 10 So, one of the things that many of us 11 did about 10 years ago, is we sat down with these 12 issues. And I was actually a senior Sorrels 13 Fellow at the time, and there were other folks 14 there, Brian Stephenson, Kim Crenshaw, there were 15 thinkers, there were -- what do we do about 16 children, and what we do about this process? 17 And one of the concepts at that time 18 was, we would take the most horrible punishment 19 of children, that was -- Roper was on the horizon 20 to get rid of the death penalty, but we would 21 take children who the large numbers who had 22 committed homicides, and we would get the Supreme	52 1 Rights, we started putting in questions, we made 2 it an issue thing. 3 The convention on the rights of the 4 child forbids this, the ICCPR forbids it. And 5 when we started to urge that these -- really that 6 the UN bodies address it. So, the United Nations 7 Human Rights Committee addressed this issue as 8 part of their observations. Then the Committee 9 Against Torture included this issue in their 10 recommendations on U.S. compliance. 11 Then the Committee on Elimination of 12 Racial Discrimination addressed it with SIR, 13 saying it -- because it was just 14 disproportionately children of color. Then we -- 15 the human rights -- U.S. Human Rights Network did 16 a whole report called, Children in Conflict of 17 the Law and addressed it. 18 And we took it to the Inter-American 19 Commission. While -- which it pains me to say, 20 has now had it for seven years, without a report, 21 but that's a whole other issue, but many of you 22 know in this body here.

53 1 And then, we decided to work toward 2 the -- to the Supreme Court, and we worked 3 together to bring the first case, which is Grant 4 v. Florida in 2010, and what's so important about 5 Gran, what's so important, is that in the 6 opinion, in the opinion, because the Amicus 7 briefs were deeply based on human rights analysis 8 and remedies, in the opinion, the court itself 9 started to quote -- and it's one of the few 10 cases, of course, that the court has adopted 11 language referencing the international treaties 12 and bodies, and in doing so, the court said, 13 there is support for our conclusion. 14 And the conclusion was that life 15 without the possibility of parole for children, 16 in this case that did not commit homicide crimes, 17 was unconstitutional. They said, "there is 18 support for conclusion in the fact that 19 continuing to impose life without parole 20 sentences on juveniles who did not commit 21 homicide, the United States adheres to a 22 sentencing practice rejected the world over.	55 1 We were not there yet. And so, we went, in the 2 Miller case, Miller v. Alabama, which was two 3 years later only, which is pretty amazing in 4 terms of the trajectory. 5 The court took about two years after, 6 to abolish life without possibility of parole for 7 children across -- who had committed any crimes, 8 including homicide crimes. And in that case, I 9 wasn't at the argument, but I remember the person 10 who was there, who argued it, coming out and 11 saying, we've won. 12 And I said, are you sure? And they 13 said, everyone but Scalia, Yu, and Thomas, of 14 course, because he didn't speak, but used the 15 word children, and they used the word children 40 16 times in that opinion. There were no more 17 juveniles, there were no more inmates, there were 18 no more convicts, there were only children. 19 And we did win, although there's a 20 nasty footnote by Scalia about -- Justice Scalia, 21 about how, how could people call murderers 22 children? And -- but that was from beginning to
54 1 "Today, we continue the long-standing 2 practice in building global consensus." It's not 3 long-standing practice; I don't know, but "global 4 consensus against the sentencing practice in 5 question. We note that as the petitioner and the 6 Amici emphasize, Article 37 A in the United 7 States convention, on the rights of the child, 8 ratified by every nation except the United States 9 and Somalia, prohibits the imposition of life in 10 prison without possibility of release, for 11 offenses committed by persons under the age of 12 18. 13 "As we concluded in Roper, the United 14 States now stands alone in the world, and has 15 turned its face against life without parole for 16 juvenile non-homicide offenders." 17 So, this was, for us, a big win, that 18 we framed it this way, that the court heard it, 19 and that the court, it added to not wanting to be 20 exceptional. 21 But the language in this, if you'd 22 note, is juveniles persons, we weren't there yet.	56 1 end, and it was 10 years. It was a 10-year 2 effort. 3 But to take this -- to make the 4 recognition of children and the human rights, 5 that they're entitled to be treated consistent 6 with their status as children, was because of the 7 human rights frame, because of working with all 8 the advocates on this one way to go forward. 9 And there's still a lot to do, but now 10 we have a body of case law that allows us to talk 11 about children. Why should children be in adult 12 courts at all? Why should children be in any 13 adult prisons? Why should this be happening, 14 when it's contrary to any concept of how we treat 15 our children in this world? And it's 16 exceptional. 17 I would note one -- you know, I think 18 it's very positive. I think it's encouraging. I 19 would note one caveat. We argued in the cases, 20 and in Montgomery, which was a decision by 21 Justice Sotomayor, who carried on the decision 22 about against life without parole, and added to

57 1 the fact that this should not be done. 2 We argued from mental health. We 3 argued -- we had briefs from doctors, talking 4 about brain science, what all of us as parents 5 know anyways, that our children are not ready for 6 prime time prior to the age of 18, and they're 7 impulsive, and all of that sort of thing. 8 We had business community briefs, we 9 had faith briefs, we had victim's families 10 briefs, we had race, a deep race by LDF put in, 11 and the only thing that our Supreme Court would 12 not touch, was race. Everything else was there. 13 Class, economic problems, failure to 14 have good counsel, because they all had assigned 15 counsel, awful, you know, community upbringing, 16 failure of the social services to intervene in 17 abuse situations. Everything was there, and 18 completely silent on the fact that's deeply in 19 our, certainly in our juvenile justice system, 20 for youth, which is a disproportionate impact on 21 children of color. 22 So, we still have a ways to go, and you	59 1 a question about -- you remember, President 2 Obama, at the end of his term, tried to say that 3 prisons under federal authority could no longer 4 be private, and as soon Trump came in, he said, 5 no, we're going to have private prisons, where -- 6 so, can you comment on private prisons, indeed, 7 how much worse are they than public prisons? 8 Thank you. 9 PROFESSOR HELLERSTEIN: I've always 10 been of the view that private prisons are totally 11 unacceptable. They operate on a single line, 12 profit, and when that's all you care about, you 13 don't care about much else. And I've not had any 14 personal experience with private prisons, because 15 the New York system doesn't have them, but 16 I've -- I'm aware of my friends who do, and just 17 what's out there, and it's not a good thing. 18 It never should've started. It 19 doesn't -- it raises constitutional issues, but 20 it raises human issues. You know, here we fought 21 all these years to professionalize -- to attempt 22 to professionalize prisons run by state
58 1 know, with regard to we have got there for 2 children, but I think that we have to push our 3 courts into the other inequities that fill -- 4 result in filling our detention facilities, and 5 our prisons. 6 But I'm heartened, and again, and I 7 thank our honoree for giving us the spot to merge 8 these two concepts on -- and pull them together 9 to move forward the law. Thank you. 10 MR. MENDEZ: Thank all three of you for 11 wonderful presentations, and for the hopeful tone 12 of them. Also, for keeping to the time 13 allocated, which gives us a chance for having 14 questions and answers. Questions from the 15 audience, and answers from you all, in the next 16 maybe 20 minutes or so. 17 I assume that we have a microphone that 18 we can circulate? Or maybe not. Anyway, I would 19 appreciate it if you identify yourself as you ask 20 your question or make your comment. The floor is 21 open. Please. 22 AUDIENCE: I'm (inaudible), and I have	60 1 officials, and as you heard in my remarks, some 2 people disagree, I think we made some progress. 3 There is a greater sensitivity. In 4 various places, they're doing it the right way. 5 Prison officials sometimes consult with 6 prisoners' rights organizations before they do 7 some things. Not often, but the dialogue has 8 changed depending on what state you're in, what 9 locality you're in. 10 I don't think that exists at all in the 11 private prison system. I find it abhorrent. I 12 have never heard anyone say that, look at our 13 private prison system, that we're got here -- 14 it's been amazing you have it. It is not. So, 15 the sooner it leaves, totally the better. 16 PROFESSOR LABELLE: I would just add, 17 being from Michigan, and where they do have them, 18 or had them, think they are on a lane, frankly, 19 with Supreme Court decisions that held them to 20 the same standards from the state. 21 PROFESSOR HELLERSTEIN: Right. 22 PROFESSOR LABELLE: And so the wahoo,

61 1 we can get away with all of this, and it is, and 2 they were, but they've been hit very hard with 3 damages, and -- which is the only thing they care 4 about, money. So, I think that -- I don't 5 think -- I think that trend is against. 6 MR. MENDEZ: Mr. Cam. 7 MR. CAM: Yes, your comment on the 8 University's in the District of Columbia -- 9 (Crosstalk) 10 MR. CAM: And how would you -- how 11 would you recommend that we in clinical programs 12 increase awareness and amplify the voices of the 13 kids who were being subjected to this? 14 MR. MENDEZ: The question was, for 15 those who couldn't hear, how our panelists would 16 recommend using the clinical programs of law 17 schools to foster these principles that we've 18 been talking about, if I understood you 19 correctly. 20 MR. CAM: Correct. 21 PROFESSOR SMITH: Being a clinician -- 22 thanks for the softball bit. I think that the	63 1 this work, and sort of dream these different 2 ideas, and come up with different mechanisms in 3 order to address this inequality. 4 MR. CAM: Are there partnerships with 5 client groups that could be formed, that you 6 would suggest? 7 PROFESSOR SMITH: Absolutely. I mean, 8 I think that, you know, one of the key features 9 of the clinical education is being client 10 centered. You know, that we don't -- we bring 11 the cases, but the cases are those of the 12 clients, in terms of being client centered. 13 And there's amazing work that's going 14 on, not only in conditions clinics, but also, for 15 example, going on in reentry clinics, going on in 16 entrepreneurship clinics as well. And so, this 17 issue of human rights, and actually civil and 18 political rights, restoring the vote, giving 19 people access to being able to get business 20 licenses, and get their life back is also 21 important. 22 And so, I'd argue that the issue of
62 1 answer is to actually have these clinics, and to 2 support them. I also think that these clinics 3 need to be more than one semester clinics, 4 because as you can tell from those of us who have 5 been doing this work, these are not cases that 6 are resolved in a semester. 7 These are cases that are long-standing, 8 and that require a long-term commitment over many 9 years, sometimes decades, and in fact some of the 10 most important prison litigation has come out of 11 the contributions of law school clinical 12 programs. 13 But it's also very hard. Many clinics, 14 you know, do not have the benefit of being on 15 hard money, they are funded by grants, and so I'm 16 looking over in this area, which I suspect has 17 some funders in it somewhere. 18 And so, I would suggest that the 19 importance of funding this work is also really 20 key to that, not only in terms of its longevity 21 and its durability, but also building the cadre 22 of lawyers who are going to go ahead and continue	64 1 prisons is actually quite present in every aspect 2 of our clinical programs, in all of those -- in 3 all of those clinics, so thank you for the 4 question. 5 MR. MENDEZ: Stand up. 6 PROFESSOR LABELLE: If I could respond 7 from the other perspective. We have -- I'm in 8 Ann Arbor, the University of Michigan, there's 9 also Lane State Law School, and we have students 10 deeply embedded, not just in our firm, that we 11 have created cohorts, so -- or groups, so that we 12 have someone from the school social work, someone 13 from the school public health, someone from the 14 clinic of law program, and information technology 15 working as one core group with -- we do the 16 oversight through the clinical law, in terms of 17 some of the cases we're doing, because -- and 18 we're adding a journalism student, because 19 media's so important. 20 And it is -- works really good, not 21 only in our firm, but there have been, of late, 22 many of the firms, like OTC in DC and New York,

65 1 we have Latham, we have Cleary, all of the blue 2 stocking firms want to commit, especially to the 3 issues of -- they like children in detention, and 4 so it sells better for them, and so they have 5 committed big pro bono resources. 6 And what's been helpful to the clinical 7 law programs, is to also embed for the summer, 8 the clinical students within those law firms, so 9 it allows to carry on beyond the semester. 10 PROFESSOR SMITH: Right. 11 PROFESSOR LABELLE: So, there are 12 creative ways to do it, and it is so important 13 and so useful for us, and I think for the 14 students. 15 MR. MENDEZ: Professor, I understand 16 you want to comment on that? 17 PROFESSOR HELLERSTEIN: I'd be glad to 18 comment on it. I'm grand devotee of clinical 19 education, of the point of view of the student, 20 as well as whatever segment of the population has 21 sought to being helped. At my law school, I 22 created a second local clinic, which is a non-DNA	67 1 the early years, a dreadful mistake. 2 Clinical education is here to stay. It 3 not only serves to marry students to the problems 4 of the world in all contexts, it gives them a 5 (inaudible). This was also true of the Proskauer 6 firm, where I -- you know, you can have six to 7 seven-year associates at the big firms, they have 8 never argued a motion, they have never had a 9 deposition. They have done bupkis, as we would 10 say. 11 They've worked, you know, 9,000 hours a 12 week, lost their wives, you know, but they've 13 never done anything in their department, except 14 when they've worked for me on prisoners' rights 15 cases, and they couldn't wait. 16 And we had an arrangement with the 17 Southern district. We would take all the 18 prisoners' rights cases on the docket there, we 19 could handle, and that changed their lives. They 20 were cross-examining, they were writing motions, 21 they were arguing temporary this, temporary that, 22 they felt like lawyers.
66 1 innocence project. 2 And the students who have worked with 3 me, not only have been incredible, but who have 4 been in evaluation said, if I took nothing else 5 in law school, this was worth the price. If it's 6 worth the price, from the point of view of the 7 law student, and I've seen it in a number of 8 contexts in my career, having run a large law 9 office (inaudible). 10 For seven years I was pro bono counsel 11 for the Proskauer firm in New York, and had the 12 delightful opportunity of using the millions of 13 big law to litigate prison cases. Litigated at 14 statewide deprivation by our prison system in New 15 York, of the services for the hearing of disabled 16 and deaf. 17 Inmates got a statewide settlement, 18 despite the strong opposition of our least 19 desirable Attorney General at the time, Dennis 20 Vacco. So, to me, there was nothing -- I'm well 21 aware of the battles that engaged, of the 22 academic community against clinical education in	68 1 So, clinical education is tremendous in 2 so many ways, and I've learned that young people 3 have very important things to say to the alpha 4 (inaudible) like me who are litigating, because 5 our view, like Earl Warren, is dead. They have 6 different perspectives. They're also much better 7 at technological stuff. So, is the pleasure from 8 all -- all various sources, that any law school 9 that doesn't commit fully to the most extensive 10 clinical program it can have, is making a 11 grievous mistake. 12 MR. MENDEZ: Thank you. I have -- I 13 think we have time for one question and your 14 answers. Professor Shaluck (phonetic)? 15 MS. SHALUCK: Thank you all, and this 16 is really more in the nature of a comment, 17 inviting all of your thoughts about this, because 18 I'd like to go back to Professor Hellerstein's 19 discussion of referencing of Herman's 20 contribution, because that's what -- one of the 21 things we're here to think about today. 22 And so, all of your remarks, as well as

69 1 the questions so far, go to what it is that early 2 work that Herman and others generated, and you 3 talked about making this topic a focus of our 4 inquiry, making the people in prison, and who 5 they are in their complexity, visible to us. 6 To thinking about them as people with 7 rights. To thinking about human rights, and 8 civil rights, and rights to basic necessities of 9 life, and just how important Herman was in 10 creating that vision of who, and it's who we are 11 as advocates, as scholars, as members of 12 faculties, as public intellectuals. 13 And so, Herman, I hope, one of the 14 messages that comes out of today, is just how 15 critical Herman's creation of that vision, and 16 not just the cases he won, or the places he went, 17 or the things he did, but all of that had 18 transformed all of us. 19 When Professor Smith spoke, and spoke 20 of her early work, going out to Lorton Prison, I 21 had just begun here at the Washington College of 22 Law, starting a women in the law program, and one	71 1 three minutes, so rather at 10:45 as I had 2 thought, so I'm going to ask the panelists to 3 react to Professor Shaluck's comments, in 4 whatever order. 5 PROFESSOR LABELLE: Well, I think that, 6 for me, it's very clear, and actually hearing 7 this talk, I started law clerking at the firm 8 Goodman, Eden &amp; Miller &amp; Goshen in Detroit. 9 Annie Goodman, was also involved later on in the 10 Attica cases. 11 And so, I learned about Mr. Schwartz's 12 work early on. He was at light speed already, 13 passing into the Midwest, and then of course, and 14 doing my work for (inaudible), and deeply 15 involved in looking at the melding of human 16 rights and work with people in detention, and 17 discussing both his cases and your writings. 18 So, it permeated all of it, and it was 19 a great, you know -- many steps. We had as many 20 steps further down the road that we didn't have 21 to travel, that was already a path, it was 22 already carved out, so I thank you for that.
70 1 of the things Brenda did, was say, come out to 2 Lorton. 3 PROFESSOR SMITH: It's true. 4 MS. SHALUCK: Talk to the inmates about 5 what you're doing in the women in the law clinic. 6 Talk about custody, and children, and visitation 7 with children, and how critical that was to the 8 lives of the women in prison. Well, that kind of 9 activity was generated by what Herman did, as 10 Professor Hellerstein did. One of the thing -- 11 first thing you wanted, and had to do, was get 12 into the prison. 13 And that's what Professor Smith was 14 doing. She was getting us into the prison to see 15 what was actually happening there. So, I don't 16 know, maybe this is -- I'm just trying to give 17 the panelists another opportunity to think about 18 your own work, and maybe people in the audience, 19 of what it -- how much of a debt we owe to the 20 people who created this for all of us. 21 MR. MENDEZ: Thank you, Professor 22 Shaluck. We actually have to close at -- in	72 1 PROFESSOR HELLERSTEIN: Well, I just 2 thought of this. Herman was a role model for me 3 in a very technical sense, and I just realized 4 this, but early on in our work with he could 5 write his first draft, was always the best. I 6 mean, he didn't have to do more than one. 7 I so him do it on airplanes, I saw him, 8 you know, do it while we were sitting together, 9 and I said to myself, why do I have to do seven, 10 or eight, and nine drafts. And I said, maybe 11 this -- and I just remembered that now, and I'd 12 ask Herman, and he gets it, and he's taken a lot 13 more than I can do, because he's got three cases 14 going, and I'm still slogging through one brief. 15 But you know, what Herman has done is 16 really immeasurable, because it's in the 17 atmosphere, both nationally and internationally. 18 But I still remember the days when Herman and Ed 19 Corrin were students, and Norman and still just 20 Herman and two students still just working away, 21 creating doctrine. 22 You know, there was no law. Ideas

73 1 weren't born then, they still aren't, as you 2 hear -- describe them, and arguing them, and 3 they're always going to be important, but there 4 was Herman with his little briefcase in his 5 office in Buffalo. 6 You know, just the way he carried 7 himself. He wasn't, you know, a tiger. He 8 wasn't one of the most impressive looking people, 9 but when he started talking, you know, -- I was 10 more aggressive. In fact, he used to call me the 11 Bronx Linebacker in one of his writings, but 12 yeah -- packing the courts, you could look it up. 13 He's got a whole thing on me, the kid from the 14 Bronx, Linebacker. 15 You know, but I took care of him, and 16 he took care of me, and he took care of a lot of 17 others, but it is like nothing else. 18 MR. MENDEZ: Professor Smith? 19 PROFESSOR SMITH: I will tell you the 20 last thing that Herman said to me, which I think 21 sums up Herman's contribution. As I was coming 22 up to do my presentation, he said, give them	75 1 the Israel Fund for almost a decade. 2 And I did not get to work with these 3 wonderful people on this panel, I came around a 4 little bit later, and -- but worked with the last 5 crop of human rights lawyers that came through 6 the New Israel Fund Law Fellowship. 7 So, I want to say -- so, I'm not going 8 to spend a lot of time introducing the folks on 9 the panel, everyone has the bios, but I want to 10 tell you a little bit about the fellowship, we 11 felt which without Herman none of us -- and none 12 of us would be here, if -- people in the last 13 panel were talking about Herman's influence. 14 Well, really, without Herman, this 15 would've not have happened, and none of us would 16 be here today. So, it's truly a credit to his 17 vision and drive. And the fellowship was, the 18 way I heard it, was that in 1983, Herman was in 19 Israel on a tour, a study tour, and sought to 20 meet with people who were doing the kind of work 21 he was doing here, and found out there were less 22 than a handful of people doing that.
74 1 hell. I think that speaks for itself. And 2 Herman, thank you for giving us a template for 3 how to continue to give them hell. Thank you so 4 much. 5 MR. MENDEZ: All right. Let me ask you 6 to thank our speakers with another round of 7 applause. We're going to go on a 15 minutes 8 coffee break now. Thank you. 9 PANEL 2 10 BUILDING A HUMAN RIGHTS COMMUNITY IN ISRAEL: 11 THE IMPACT OF THE NEW ISRAEL FUND 12 HERMAN SCHWARTZ FELLOWSHIP 13 MS. KADISH: As soon as everyone gets 14 seated, we'll get started. Yes. Good morning 15 everyone. As soon as everyone's seated, we'll 16 get started. 17 Good morning everyone. It's hot. Good 18 morning, my name is Ruti Kadish, and it's a 19 pleasure to be here, and in honor. And I am 20 fortunate enough -- was fortunate enough to 21 coordinate the New Israel Fund Herman Schwartz 22 Human Rights Fellowship, while I was working at	76 1 I think (inaudible) Galveston was one 2 of them, and I forget who the other person was -- 3 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Joshua -- I 4 don't know. 5 MS. KADISH: Less than -- anyway, less 6 than a handful of people, which reminded -- which 7 made Herman -- which gave him that idea, to start 8 a program here that would train you -- in law -- 9 Israeli attorneys, both Palestinian and Jewish 10 attorneys, and who would then go back to Israel, 11 and bring what they learned to Israel, and 12 essentially establish a Human Rights Bar in 13 Israel. 14 And that is, in fact, what happened 15 over the course of 33 years, starting in 1984. 16 There was sometimes one, sometimes two, at some 17 point two attorneys -- Israeli attorneys 18 (inaudible), at least for the last year, it was 19 always a Palestinian and Jew, would come here, 20 spend a year at WCL studying it, doing an LL.M. in 21 Human Rights Law, and more importantly, actually, 22 doing the clinical kind of work, and kind of

77 1 doing externships at Washington area NGOs in the 2 different areas of law. 3 And taking -- learning those skills, 4 seeing sort of the, really, the cutting edge, 5 state-of-the-art NGO kind of work, and then 6 taking it back to Israel in the second year of 7 the fellowship, spending that time at an NGO in 8 Israel, or in the case of some people, creating 9 an NGO in Israel. 10 And so, that is what the -- it's -- 11 that is what the fellowship did, and it's really, 12 it's -- we are hard-pressed to think of an area 13 law in Israel, of human rights law, civil rights 14 law, that was not impacted by this fellowship 15 over the course of the year, and over 50 16 graduates, but it's more like 60 graduates. 17 It's really a testament to Herman's 18 vision of what could be, and in fact, I want to 19 say two more things about -- two thing -- two 20 other things about the fellowship. One, is that 21 it was so successful, that it really organized 22 itself out of a job, because by the time the	79 1 And the other thing I want to say about 2 the fellowship that Innes (phonetic) mentioned, 3 in terms of the externships, is that Herman -- 4 you know, on my conversations with Herman, he 5 said that really, okay -- so, people will come, 6 they will do the LLM, they will do some academic 7 work, but really the important work is the 8 clinical work, is getting the experience at the 9 NGOs, in the externships, and taking that back to 10 Israel, and doing the work -- that kind of work 11 in Israel. 12 So, that's a little bit about the 13 fund -- the -- I'm sorry, the fellowship, the New 14 Israel Fund Herman Rights -- Herman Schwartz 15 Human Rights fellowship. I know, a long name, 16 but we were (inaudible) to recognize everything 17 in there. 18 So, what we're going to do this 19 morning, in this panel, is rather than focus, 20 just speak, or we're going to do it in interview 21 style, and we have a set of questions. We'll do 22 two rounds of questions, and then we'll open it
78 1 fellowship ended, it was -- we realized that it 2 was no longer necessary, that there was a Human 3 Rights Bar in Israel, that there were, out of a 4 whole range of clinics at the various law 5 schools, the various universities that were 6 continuing to train human rights lawyers, that 7 there were NGOs. 8 There was a, really, a robust movement 9 and range of NGOs that were also training human 10 rights lawyers, and the fellowship had 11 essentially -- the fellowship was, essentially, 12 no longer necessary. And I know that when -- 13 Herman says that when he first envisioned this 14 program, he thought it would last for 5, 10 15 years. 16 Well, it lasted for 33 years, and I 17 think, to a large extent, towards the end, it was 18 because it was such a wonderful program that we 19 were hard-pressed -- it was hard to let go of it, 20 even though it became clear that it really no -- 21 it was so successful, that it was no longer 22 necessary.	80 1 up to a conversation with everyone here, and 2 we'll close with -- we'll take 10 minutes at the 3 end, to allow panelists to speak personally to 4 Herman. 5 So, with that, I'll get started. So, 6 in 2004, a little over a decade and a half into 7 the life of the fellowship, there was a wonderful 8 article in Haaretz, which is the equivalent of 9 Israel's -- it's Israel's New York Times, 10 essentially, that credited the work of the law 11 fellows, the returning law fellows, in bringing 12 about it as a, it described it, a quiet 13 revolution. 14 And the author argued that the fellows 15 were dramatically transforming Israeli 16 jurisprudence, and increasing respect in Israel 17 for a fundamental human rights. I want to start 18 by asking each of the panelists to reflect on 19 their part in this revolution. 20 So, Tali, I want to start with you. 21 You came to the program as a children's rights 22 advocate, working at the national -- at Israel's

81 1 National Council for the Child. And just a few 2 years after completing the fellowship, you 3 transitioned into the field of restorative 4 justice, and also moved into academia. 5 And I wanted to ask you, how the 6 fellowship set you on this new trajectory? 7 MS. GAL: Thanks, Ruti. 8 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: (Inaudible). 9 MS. GAL: Yeah, is it working? No? 10 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: (Inaudible). 11 MS. GAL: Now? 12 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Yes. 13 MS. GAL: Okay, so thank you Ruti, and 14 we will keep the emotional part to the end, but I 15 just want to say that Herman is one of the only 16 people in the world that can take me from my 17 comfortable place in Haifa, and fly all the way 18 to the United States to talk with you, so it's -- 19 thank you, Herman, and thank you American 20 University for the invitation. I am honored and 21 humbled to be here. 22 So, to your question. I have been a	83 1 rights better, from (inaudible). So, I came to 2 the program. Herman asked me, victim's rights 3 aren't really human rights, are they? I think I 4 convinced them by the end of the year, but we had 5 a lot of discussions. 6 I went to the constitutional law class 7 with Herman, which was amazing. And I also did 8 internship in -- two internships in two wonderful 9 places. One is the office for victims of crime 10 at the Ministry of Justice, and the other one is 11 a children's advocacy center, which is a one-stop 12 shop for children -- victimized children, and 13 they receive everything throughout their trial. 14 And what I found during my studies -- 15 MR. YAKIR: (Inaudible). 16 MS. GAL: Is that better now? 17 MS. KADISH: Yeah, we'll share this 18 one. 19 MS. GAL: Yeah, we'll share it. Is 20 that better? 21 GROUP: Yes. 22 MS. GAL: So, what I found while I was
82 1 children's rights lawyer. I was working at the 2 National Counsel for the Child, with Tamar Morag, 3 whom you'll hear from soon. She was my mentor 4 and (inaudible), and I was finally accepted to 5 the program, which took me two years I think, to 6 be accepted. 7 And I convinced the committee that 8 children's rights are human rights. Actually, it 9 was -- oh, shoot. (Inaudible). 10 (Crosstalk) 11 MS. GAL: So, Tamar made the way for me 12 to say that children's rights are human rights. 13 But I had another, all similar to path, which was 14 that victim's rights were human rights, because I 15 was working with child victims, escorting them to 16 court, and preparing them to give testimony, and 17 walking with them, and holding their hands, and 18 giving them water, and going with them to 19 (inaudible) every time, their testimony was 20 (inaudible), et cetera. 21 And I was trying to learn how to 22 promote victim's rights, and child victim's	84 1 working as an intern, and also during my studies, 2 is that, really, when I look at victim's rights, 3 and when I look at defendant's rights, human 4 rights, because I consider myself -- considered 5 myself, and still do as a human rights activist 6 researcher, sometimes, and very often, they 7 conflict with each other. 8 And these questions were bothering me, of 9 course, were bothering me. So, I came back to 10 Israel, and the year here was amazing, and I 11 wrote a thesis, and I wrote seminars, and it was 12 wonderful. It was different from the LLB, 13 because suddenly I was able to create something, 14 and not only to study passively. 15 And I had this -- first of all, I got 16 the idea of studying more, just because it was so 17 much fun, so doing a PhD. And the other thing 18 was, that I was looking for something that would 19 not have this conflict between victim's rights 20 and offender's rights. 21 I heard about restorative justice when 22 I -- while I was here, and I kept learning about

85 1 it, and reading about it, and then I decided to 2 go to do a PhD of restorative justice, focusing 3 on child victims. And I did that later on, a few 4 years later, later in -- at the Australian 5 National University, in Australia, with John 6 Braithwaite, who is the leading criminologist in 7 restorative justice. 8 But the seeds were planted here, 9 opening my mind to different values, and 10 different human rights, and to studying more 11 deeply than in the first degree, which was great, 12 but different. So, I hope this is answering your 13 question. 14 MS. KADISH: Thank you. Hasan, I want 15 to turn to you. So, the story I heard from 16 Herman, is that you came here intending to 17 proceed to a PhD, and he had something else 18 entirely in mind. Something more of like, what 19 would become Adalah, the legal center for Arab 20 minority rights in Israel, which you founded when 21 you went back. 22 And I don't -- I won't ask you to	87 1 question, and I am happy to be here. It's 2 really -- it brings back very good nostalgia to 3 see friends that I know them 20 years ago, and we 4 still with some have a great connection. I came 5 here in 1994, 1995. 6 This year, consider one of the best 7 years, and maybe the best year for any 8 progressive Israeli Jewish person, and 9 Palestinian person. This year was the year of 10 the agreement between Israeli government, Rabin 11 government, and the PLO, something that no one of 12 us imagined before. 13 And this year was the rise, 14 internationally, of multiculturalism. Those 15 years, the years of the fall of apartheid, after 16 the fall of Berlin Wall, so the optimism is very, 17 very high. 18 And in Israel, in fact, was just one 19 civil rights organization, the Association for 20 Civil Rights in Israel, ACRI, which is like the 21 ACLU, similar to the ACLU job description here, 22 and before I came, I worked as a lawyer there.
86 1 confirm that story, but I would like -- 2 MR. YAKIR: But the good news is -- the 3 good news is that Hasan just recently completed 4 his PhD, with a distinction from the (inaudible), 5 from the Faculty of Law, of the Hebrew 6 University, Jerusalem. So, it's -- that's quite 7 a (inaudible). That's quite a few years, between 8 you and me. 9 MS. KADISH: Now I don't feel so bad. 10 It took me 10. So -- but I do want to reflect on 11 how -- when I ask you to reflect on how the 12 fellowship informed the establishment of Adalah. 13 MR. YAKIR: Maybe without this. 14 MS. KADISH: Your voice is (inaudible). 15 MS. GAL: Go ahead. 16 MS. KADISH: Speak loudly. 17 MR. JABAREEN: Is my voice strong 18 without that? 19 (Crosstalk) 20 MS. KADISH: No, go. I turned that 21 off. I turned that off. 22 MR. JABAREEN: Thank you for this	88 1 So, I came here, it was also for the 2 first time for me to come to U.S., and English 3 for me, third language after Arabic and Hebrew, 4 it wasn't easy to begin. It wasn't easy in the 5 beginning, but I knew that I have to be trained 6 to be human rights lawyer, especially that I came 7 from country that there is no heritage of human 8 right lawyering. 9 There is no heritage. Of course, 10 lawyering, except that experience of ACRI, which 11 was limited to few lawyers at that time. And 12 within that, I said to Herman, in the low schools 13 of Israel, there is not one Palestinian 14 academics. 15 Maybe I will make my PhD, because in 16 Israel, to be in the law school, you'd be very 17 influential, and they had been very influential, 18 and maybe I can influence the discourse. And 19 then I raise the universal question in human 20 rights, that then this what shape my legal 21 consciousness. 22 I said, in fact, also, there is no need

89 1 for separate organization, we have ACRI. ACRI is 2 universal, serve Arab and Jews, men and women, 3 right and left, and it's colorblind. Then he 4 said, well, that's in Israel, but our experience 5 show that beside ACLU, we have also NAACP. And 6 we cannot imagine the American civil rights 7 movement today, without NAACP. 8 So, yes, in the human rights 9 philosophy, we can, and it's important, also, to 10 establish organization based on politics of 11 identity, but not to stuck there. To know that 12 it's empowering, only, to start with that. 13 And I am going to suggest to you, to do 14 your internship in NAACP. And it's yes, for the 15 first time, I was exposed to a human right 16 organization, or civil right organization that 17 based on identity, ethnic, racial, or any other 18 kind of identity, and yes, with universal 19 perspective. 20 The establishment based on particular 21 identity, but the work will carry universal 22 perspective. And after that experience, I said,	91 1 (inaudible). 2 So, it's difficult to say, thank you, 3 Herman, because the facts come usually toward the 4 end of mission. I can say I love you, Herman. I 5 appreciate what you did. And Herman continue 6 with relation with us, and support, and I think 7 we still have, together, to think, and to consult 8 with Herman about the new era that we are facing 9 today, from his experience. 10 We established, as I said, in the era 11 of Oslo agreement, when we thought that the human 12 right framework is based on the concept of two 13 state solution, meaning West Bank, Gaza is 14 Jerusalem will be best in international 15 humanitarian law, and Israel is separate legal 16 system, based on Israeli constitutionalism, and 17 the incubation is temporarily. 18 All that I have (inaudible) was saying 19 the incubation will be in that. And he was 20 optimistic. All of us were optimistic at that 21 time. But today, this perspective falls. So, 22 how we can conceptualize our human right
90 1 in fact, I was exposed for the first time to 2 something like that. We -- I didn't know. We 3 didn't have something. 4 And he encouraged me to go back, and to 5 establish organization for the Palestinian rights 6 in Israel. And yes, we did that, and the name of 7 the organization, Adelah, the Legal Center for 8 Arabic Minority Rights. 9 Now, our organization already had, we 10 can say, seven formal fellows of this program. 11 And I have here, also, friends that they support 12 us, like Aryeh Neier that he was the president of 13 OSI, give a support. 14 And OSI bought our organization in the 15 beginning of 2000s, a few years after the 16 establishment as the flagship human right 17 organization in the Middle East, and we are proud 18 of that. And yes, I think after 20 years, what 19 Herman told me, I think every Israeli human right 20 lawyers, and Palestinian human rights lawyer can 21 say today, that we cannot imagine the human 22 rights movement in Israel, Palestine without that	92 1 lawyering by imagining that there is no such 2 solution, and maybe we have to look to all 3 Palestine, Israel (inaudible) West Bank, Gaza is 4 Jerusalem as one entity, and how can speak of 5 constitutional rights and equal rights between, 6 for example, settlers in the West Bank and 7 Palestinian West Bank. Is it possible? 8 So, we are facing, now, a new agenda, 9 and I am sure that Herman love those challenges, 10 and he is the man who can give good consultation, 11 good advice, good word from his experience. This 12 is why I say we still have time to work with 13 Herman. 14 MS. KADISH: Thank you, Hasan. We're 15 going to turn now to Tamar. Tamar, are you there 16 on video link? 17 MS. MORAG: Yes, I'm here. Can you 18 hear me? 19 MS. KADISH: I can hear you, but I 20 can't see you, so I -- because you're on -- 21 anyway, you're in front of me, but in any event. 22 MS. MORAG: Oh.

93 1 MS. KADISH: So, Tamar's joining us 2 from Israel. Tamar, you mentioned that the law 3 fellowship was formative in several ways when we 4 talked. I'd love for you to talk a little bit 5 about your experience coming into the fellowship, 6 and how it impacted your work going forward. 7 MS. MORAG: Sure. When I arrived in 8 Washington, in 1987, I wanted to become child 9 advocate. It actually had been a dream of mine 10 since I was in law school, but when I tried to 11 examine what was favorable in Israel at the time, 12 I found almost nothing. 13 And my first internship in Washington, 14 which Herman set up for me, was at the Children's 15 Defense Fund, the leading child advocacy 16 organization. I remember my first day there. 17 When I walked into the building and saw the 18 posters on the wall. 19 Posters that dealt with the campaign 20 that they had at the time, of issues such as 21 child poverty, children in prison, children 22 making a difference. All making a statement	95 1 University, was for me no less important, and I 2 disagree with Herman Schwartz about all the 3 program being about (inaudible). 4 And some of my colleagues have already 5 said, this combination of academic studies and 6 (inaudible) is what made the program so 7 successful. It is here that I learned about 8 following (phonetic) Professor Schwartz's 9 process, about the foundations of American 10 constitutional law, and theoretical, and 11 ideological basis of the human rights 12 (inaudible). 13 And this was right before the 14 (inaudible) would become much more relevant in 15 Israeli law in the early 1990s, so that was a 16 very important piece for all of our (inaudible). 17 And I returned, I joined the Israel National 18 Counsel for the Child, which is a leading child 19 advocacy organization (inaudible), and was 20 appointed its first legal advocate. 21 The other -- the deep influence of this 22 year on my motivation and my commitment, we can
94 1 about children and their interests being as 2 center of our policy. 3 This was an incredible moment for me, 4 just seeing those posters, because I think that 5 for the first time I thought that maybe child 6 advocacy is a real and legitimate field, and that 7 I was in the right place. 8 But later on I interned in three other 9 organizations. At the ACLU here in DC, that I 10 think many fellows interned in. I interned at 11 the Street Law Project at Georgetown Law School, 12 and later on in New York at the Children's Rights 13 Project of the ACLU. 14 Interning or working in these very, 15 very different organizations exposed me, first of 16 all, to a broad range of tools and strategies for 17 social change, and yeah that I admit there are 18 some amazing and inspiring people who shared a 19 strong enthusiasm for their work, and a belief 20 the change is possible. 21 The second part of the program, which 22 involved studying here at the American	96 1 (inaudible) it's probably the most important in 2 fact, and (inaudible) many significant issues and 3 specific issues that I have been involved in over 4 the years that are strongly connected to my 5 Washington experience. 6 (Inaudible), I can locate a direct 7 influence of the fellowship, for example, the 8 most dominant examples are import of two models 9 I've learned about in the U.S.. The one being 10 the Street Law Project in which law schools -- 11 law students teach youth of disadvantaged groups 12 about law, as a tool for empowering them and 13 teaching them about their right. This actually 14 operates now in two Israeli (inaudible). 15 And the other one is the Guardian 16 (inaudible) model for separate representation of 17 children, in both child protection and custody. 18 More interestingly, the fellowship also had a 19 significant impact on me in connection with one 20 of the most difficult effort I took part in, and 21 I'm talking about is the U.S., unfortunately, is 22 still very controversial, and that is the

97 1 prohibition of corporal punishment of children by 2 both parents and teachers. 3       Resonating with me in this campaign, 4 which I'm happy to say eventually led to the full 5 prohibition of punishment for human rights 6 (inaudible), that other disempowered groups that 7 have (inaudible) me ever since my year in 8 Washington. 9       Now, (inaudible) concern with 10 children's rights, the fellowship influenced my 11 (inaudible) in other fields as well. For many 12 years I taught a course on law and social change, 13 which was largely based on best (phonetic) 14 lecturers, and tried to get in this course the 15 students a taste of my experience in the 16 fellowship by exposing them to various actors in 17 the field. 18       Many, if not most, of the guest 19 lecturer were in fact (inaudible) were here on 20 this panel, who came I think more than once to 21 speak at the school. And then, throughout this 22 course (inaudible) year after year that there	99 1 what I'd love to hear from you is, what did you 2 bring when -- after the year here, what changed 3 in your work, or what did you bring back that was 4 different from your experience at ACRI prior to 5 the fellowship? 6       MR. YAKIR: I was involved with ACRI as 7 a second-year law student, at the Tel Aviv branch 8 of ACRI, the Association for Civil Rights in 9 Israel, and I came here as a very young lawyer, 10 and left Washington exactly 30 years ago. 11       I came as a second-year lawyer, with no 12 practical experience in public law, 13 constitutional law, or human rights law. I 14 worked into private lawyer -- law firms, and then 15 with contracts, and civil litigation. 16       And the first experience I got was 17 here, through the academic courses, both on 18 constitutional law -- American constitutional 19 law, the First Amendment with Bert Wexler, that I 20 could (inaudible), and international humanitarian 21 law, and the law of war with Raywood Goldman, 22 which was not an abstract -- this abstract
98 1 were a variety of fellows that came to lecture 2 and talk about their work, in what I can only 3 describe as the transformative influence, the 4 influence that Washington had on Israeli law 5 (inaudible). 6       So, looking back now, 30 years later, 7 at the role that the fellowship had had in my 8 year, and we'll -- we will be emotional later on, 9 but I already want to say that I am deeply aware, 10 and very, very thankful for the great impact it 11 has had in life. 12       MS. KADISH: Thank you, Tamar. And 13 last, I'm turning to Dan. Dan, you were one of 14 the early fellows, and you came into the 15 fellowship having been at ACRI, at the 16 Association for Civil Rights, as many mentioned, 17 as some of us have mentioned already, one of the 18 first and, at that time, only human rights 19 organization in Israel. 20       Maybe not the only, but among the -- 21 and you came in and, from my understanding, you 22 intended to go back there. So, what I was --	100 1 concept. 2       So, international law for us, because 3 unfortunately is very -- it's a leading force on 4 the Gulf, of occupation and the law of war, and I 5 done it extensively later on with human rights 6 violation in the territories of (inaudible) 7 specialties. 8       So, on the one side there were those 9 legal -- the academic courses that I took, that 10 gave me a fine perspective of American law and 11 international law. And secondly, it was the 12 practical experience with the ACLU, and Ard 13 Spitzer (phonetic) was my boss back then, and 14 Lily (phonetic) the director of the (inaudible) 15 branch of the ACLU. 16       And he is still in this position after 17 all those years, as I am in the same position 18 with ACRI, and I learned a lot from him, 19 accompanying him. The main case that was 20 litigated in the spring term of 1989 was against 21 the minor curfew law. 22       The DC Council adopted a law requiring

1 all minors to stay at home during the night
2 because the murders rate in Washington DC was at 3 the highest in the country, or the second highest 4 in the country. And it was fascinating to see 5 Ard building the case, assembling the plaintiffs.
6 One was a Jewish kid who was selling
7 for the bar mitzvah, and couldn't attend a bar
8 mitzvah party because it was in the night. One 9 was a minister who couldn't baptize a born 10 children at midnight mass.
11 Another was a kid who was in drama 12 course, and couldn't go to rehearsals because 13 they were over the curfew hours. And another was 14 a child who had to work for a living and couldn't 15 work night shift because of that.
16 So, well, it was back then. I should 17 remind you, it was back then in 1989. There was 18 no Internet, and Ard sent me to the main library
19 here at the Law University. On January 1, 1989, 20 there was -- Washington Post published a full-21 page of pictures of all the murder victims of 22 1988, and Ard sent me to the main library here at 102

1 the -- and he knew to go over the microfiches of 2 the Washington Post that had the date -- the 3 name, the date, and the age of the victim.
4 And I had to go through all the minor 5 victims, and through their microfiche, to try to 6 assess what were the circumstances of their 7 murder, and if a minor curfew law was, in fact,
8 would've prevented that murder.
9 And my findings were that all of them,
10 or almost all of them, were murdered in-house,
11 and the curfew law would not have prevented it.
12 And I filed an affidavit with the court, and you 13 can find a full note in the judge's decision 14 granting a preliminary injunction, mentioning my 15 affidavit. So, this was my main contribution to 16 American constitutional law.
17 But that was a lesson for life. How to 18 build a case. How to recruit plaintiffs, a 19 variety of plaintiffs, that their constitutional 20 rights were infringed upon. How to present our 21 argument before a federal -- the District Court.
22 And I, during the summer, I moved to 103

1 New York, working with the Lesbian and the Gay 2 Rights Project, as it was called back then at the 3 ACLU, before we started to call it the LGBTQI 4 community, and that was a fascinating, both 5 personally and professionally for me.
6 Being gay, very much in the closet, it 7 was a formative experience, both personally and 8 professionally, working there on gay-rights at 9 the very interesting moment in the history of the 10 community back then. And all those scales and 11 (inaudible) I came back to ACRI, and my main goal
12 in applying to the fellowship, was to get back 13 for the second year to join ACRI, because this 14 was the only chance to join ACRI as a lawyer.
15 ACRI had only two lawyers back then.
16 Both of them fellows of this wonderful program.
17 Joshua Sheflam (phonetic), who was the first 18 fellow, and Ned Basive (phonetic), who was on the 19 second year of the program, and that gave me an 20 opportunity to join the Tel Aviv branch, to be 21 the first lawyer of the Tel Aviv chapter of ACRI, 22 and I've stayed since.

104

1 MS. KADISH: For our second round of 2 questions, I want to dive -- ask our folks to 3 dive a little bit into the actual work in 4 Israel -- Israel, Palestine. And so, Tamar,
5 we'll start with you this time. You've -- much 6 of your work is focused on advancing the rights
7 of children to separate representation in court 8 proceedings, and their right to participate in 9 all decision making that affects them.
10 Could you please share with us a little 11 bit of the developments in Israeli law regarding 12 these issues, and if relevant, how that -- if 13 there's anything you've brought from the 14 fellowship to that?
15 MS. MORAG: Definitely. Thanks.
16 (Inaudible) I want to draw a distinction between 17 two different initiatives that I was involved in.
18 One borrowing directly from the United States, 19 was the recognition of children's rights to have 20 proper (inaudible).
21 That means to have a lawyer of their 22 own. A lawyer that represents only their 105

1 interests, and not the interests of the state,
2 not the interests of the parent, both in child
3 protection proceedings, as well as in custodies.
4 The other initiative that I'm currently 5 involved in, is a development of mechanisms for 6 child presentation in all decisions that affects 7 them. That means that we should ensure that the 8 child has the right to be heard, if possible, 9 directly, before a decision is made on his or her 10 behalf.

11 Now, I'll start with (inaudible)
12 initiative. Learning during my year in 13 Washington, developing American law, that already 14 at the time viewed the appointment of (inaudible) 15 of lawyers representing children as imperative to 16 securing children's due process rights, and 17 safeguarding checks and balances (inaudible)
18 child protection proceedings, was actually a 19 formative experience for me.

20 And when I returned to Israel, I was so 21 excited about this, that you know, that one of 22 the first that we did at the Israel National

1 At the end of the 1990s, after Israel
2 joined the UN convention on the rights of the 3 child, a very special committee for the plaintiff 4 (phonetic). The committee was asked to 5 reevaluate the entire value of Israeli child law 6 in light of the convention on the right of the 7 child.

8 I was appointed as vice chair of this 9 committee, and I'll not be able to share all 10 committees right here, but as part of my role in 11 this committee, I was also assigned the issue of 12 (inaudible) for (inaudible) of children, and we 13 did write a very full and long report on the 14 matter.

15 And following the latest 16 recommendation, UNEC (phonetic) was at the 17 Israeli legal aid, with a wonderful name. It's 18 called Lawyer On My Own, For My Own (phonetic), 19 which (inaudible) with child representation of 20 children, and children are quite regularly were 21 not going to get it.

22 There's still a (inaudible), but 106

108

1 Counsel for the Child, was to establish a part of 2 the project (phonetic) for child representation, 3 (inaudible) separate representation --
4 representatives for children.

5 And yet, this kind of project was met
6 at the time, we're talking about the early 90s, 7 especially in the area of child protection, with 8 a lot of opposition. In looking back, I think 9 that at the time, it was foreign to Israeli 10 culture.

11 Over the years though, partly due to 12 changes in the Israeli society, in which rights 13 talk has been more significant place, and trust 14 in government has decreased, and with this -- 15 with the decrease of trust in government, the 16 recognition of the (inaudible) checks and 17 balances, and partly due to the dignity of other 18 (inaudible) who've joined the efforts to enable 19 children to have a guardian (phonetic)
20 (inaudible), the idea of the need to have a 21 separate representative for children began to 22 percolate into Israeli law.

1 children are quite regularly appointed not with 2 child protection proceedings (phonetic), a
3 lawyer, and in many cases, also more and more 4 contested (inaudible).

5 And so you know what it is. Our latest
6 initiatives that are actually, currently involved 7 in, involve promoting children's right to 8 participate in all decision-making (inaudible).
9 The driving force for the great changes Israel is 10 going through in the area of child participation, 11 is a convention on the rights of the child, as 12 mentioned earlier, here unfortunately, the U.S.
13 does not (inaudible).

14 And from my own perspective, the 15 foundations for my activity in this field have 16 also set, and insights I gained, in the tools I 17 acquired many, many years ago (inaudible). The 18 committee (inaudible) and convention in Israel
19 developed proposals aimed at the change in child 20 participation in the various areas of children
21 (inaudible).

22 I personally was involved in the 109

1 enhancing (phonetic) (inaudible) going to be 2 developing a model of child participation, and 3 what I believe to be the most complex context, 4 and that is child participation in divorce
5 proceedings, in family courts.
6 We developed, in the committee, and 7 interdisciplinary (phonetic) model of child 8 participation, in which children are invited to 9 the family courts, in aid (phonetic) with a 10 social worker. And first of all, they're asked 11 if they want to participate at all, and if they 12 do, they're given a choice.
13 They can meet directly with the judge,
14 or chat to the social worker, who will then share 15 their views with the judge. Because of the 16 complexity of this specific context of child 17 participation, we decided we were not going to go 18 to legislation before we check out our model.
19 So, we had that (inaudible) of logic, 20 in which we tried to model in two (inaudible) and 21 had (inaudible). The results of the (inaudible)
22 study, I think, were very great. First of all,

110

1 and most importantly, were the (inaudible) from 2 the children that they really like participation.
3 I think (inaudible) that they would recommend 4 it.
5 And then some of them also said that it
6 helped them. And when we asked how it helped 7 them, well, they give a lot of reasons, but 8 (inaudible) one thing they would -- they all 9 talked about being respected, being recognized 10 (phonetic).
11 Another finding from that pilot
12 (phonetic) project, was that participation was 13 not only beneficial to the legal (inaudible), 14 which is something that we thought would happen, 15 but it was also beneficial in enhanced parent, 16 child relationship.
17 And I think that one of the most 18 interesting, yet most troubling findings from our 19 research, was the fact that we found a big gap
20 between what the parents thought the child wanted 21 or felt, and what the children felt was 22 (inaudible).

111

1 And with the child's permission, the 2 coach (inaudible) then actually shared with the 3 parent what children had said, and many parents
4 say this was (inaudible). And then actually 5 changed, many times, how (inaudible) really a 6 tool for hearing -- having children heard not 7 only by the courts, but also by (inaudible).
8 Following our pilot, legislation was 9 enacted, and child visitation units were now sent 10 (inaudible) to our family courts. I must say 11 though, there is a long way to go before we reach 12 full implementation of the legislation, its 13 process, but I hope (inaudible).
14 MS. KADISH: Thank you, Tamar. And 15 turning again to Dan. One of the things I want 16 to mention in, again, that article that those 17 of -- I'm sure those in the audience who are -- 18 were related to the fellowship -- I shoot a shout
19 out to Larry Barber (phonetic), who was the CEO
20 of NIF (phonetic) at the time, to Mort Helprin, 21 who, as part of open societies foundations,
22 helped fund the fellowship, to Norman Rosenberg,

1 who was previously the CEO, or Executive Director
2 of the Israel fund, and also had a hand in the 3 fellowship, and to Fran Goldman, who's here.
4 Acknowledging all the people who had a
5 hand in the fellowship. And to Hadar Harris, who 6 ran the fellowship on the AE side. So, for -- I
7 think all of those folks remember this article
8 that was in Haaretz in, as I said, in Israel's 9 New York Times, that in addition to mentioning 10 the work of the returning fellows, it also 11 mentioned the Chief Justice at the time, and -- 12 Aharon Barak, who was creating -- it was part of 13 this constitutional revolution.
14 And so, I want to ask Dan, who -- 15 you've argued dozens of cases in the Supreme 16 Court, both in Barak's court, and other courts
17 after that. The Wikipedia page is overwhelming, 18 so I couldn't choose cases. But I would love to 19 hear from you, of the few -- if you could 20 highlight a few cases that really were part -- 21 that are illustrative of that constitutional 22 revolution, in terms of human rights law.

1 MR. YAKIR: First of all, the fact that 2 Hasan and myself feel such at home arguing an 3 argument, a (inaudible) is that at the Supreme 4 Court, we had these exact mics as well. But 5 other than that, we -- I came back to Israel in 6 1989, and it was on the brink of the 7 constitutional revolution.

8 The two first basic laws that were 9 enacted in regard to human rights, were enacted 10 in March 1993. And even before that, during the 11 presidency of both Shargal (phonetic) and Balach
12 (phonetic), there was a shift in the court 13 towards a much more liberal court, and one of the 14 most important aspects was the changing of the 15 doctrine of standing, allowing organizations like 16 ACRI to petition the courts on their own behalf 17 without a specific person who was injured by the 18 policy of the state.

19 This doctrine is now under attack by 20 the much more conservative Supreme Court that we 21 have, but it still is in effect. It allowed us 22 to bring many issues before the court where it

1 was hard to find a person that was injured by the 2 policy, or there were a lot of people who were 3 hesitant to be in the front of such a challenge, 4 and it allowed human rights organization to bring 5 much more cases to the court.

6 Besides that, human rights and civil 7 liberties got forefront seat in the jurisprudence
8 of the court, even before the constitutional 9 revolution, but after then, and as you might 10 know, Israel doesn't have a written Constitution.
11 The decision by the Cnasa (phonetic) 1950, was 12 that the time is not right to develop a full-13 fledged written Constitution, and it will -- and 14 then be adapted by a piece of legislation called 15 Basic Laws.

16 And until 1993, many basic laws were 17 enacted regarding the branches of government, 18 basic laws of the judiciary, basic law of the 19 government, basic law of the Cnasa, basic law of 20 city controller, but no Bill of Rights, no basic 21 law in regard to human rights.

22 In 1993, the first two were enacted,

1 and the most important one is basic law, human 2 dignity and liberty. It doesn't cover all the 3 rights. Another problem, it immunizes all previous 4 legislation from constitutional challenge, but it 5 gives the court for the first time, the power of 6 judicial review over primary legislation of the 7 Cnasa.

8 Until then, the court was -- didn't 9 have the power. It adapted the doctrine of 10 interpreting every standard of the Cnacity 11 (phonetic) light, all human rights and basic 12 democratic values, but if the wording of the 13 statute was clear, there was nothing that the 14 court could do against it.

15 And since 1993, the courts had the 16 power of judicial review over primary
17 legislation, what -- and it led to a first 18 criticism by politicians, by the Cnasa, by the 19 government, whenever the court exercises its 20 power, though it's very cautious in those issues, 21 and we've a handful of sections of laws were 22 declared unconstitutional, but still it invoked a

116

1 major criticism against the court, and we have 2 now a much weakened Supreme Court because of 3 that.

4 And there are some bills to curtail the 5 power of the court. And the last government, 6 that is the current (inaudible) government, 7 wanted to pass an amendment that says that in any 8 case that the court overrules a statute of the 9 Cnasa, the Cnasa, with a special majority, will 10 be able to overturn the decision, and to say,
11 that even if the court declared it 12 unconstitutional, we ratify the statute, and it 13 will be into effect.

14 So, there were numerous cases where 15 Hasan and myself joined forces, and tried to 16 challenge statutes, and not many of them were 17 successful, but there were landmark decisions,
18 like the decision when President Barak retired, 19 he handed down a very important decision
20 declaring unconstitutional law that prevented
21 Palestinians from filing (inaudible) cases 22 against the Israeli army, in cases where

117
1 Palestinians were either killed or injured in the 2 occupied territories.
3 There were numerous other cases where 4 the court accepted part of a petition, and in 5 three consecutive years, we mounted challenges
6 against amendment to the anti-infiltration law.
7 As you know, we also have the problem of 8 asylum-seekers and refugees, and there is a lot 9 of controversy via the right policy towards them.
10 And those amendments gave the power to 11 the Ministry of Interior, to indefinitely
12 incarcerate asylum-seekers and refugees, in order 13 to coerce them to leave the country. And in 14 three consecutive years, the Supreme Court 15 accepted parts of our petition, limiting the 16 power of the state to incarcerate refugees or 17 asylum-seekers, and this brought a lot of 18 criticism against the court.
19 And there was a proposal of amendment
20 to bar the Supreme Courts from dealing with 21 immigration policy whatsoever, but it didn't 22 pass. And the optimistic part of the last

118
1 election results, is that the government, we 2 won't have a majority to pass such an amendment
3 against the powers of the Supreme Court.
4 MS. KADISH: That is maybe the most 5 hopeful part, right? We walked away from the 6 brink of disaster. Hasan, I won't to turn the 7 same question to you. If you can highlight a 8 couple of cases over the last 20 years that 9 you're particularly proud of, particularly 10 influential, particularly important in your mind?
11 MR. JABAREEN: I was -- 12 MS. KADISH: I know it's hard to 13 choose, but in the interest of time.
14 MR. JABAREEN: I will choose the 15 most -- I will choose two cases that they are 16 considered, probably considered by many, that 17 they are the most influential cases, or at least 18 one of the few most influential cases in Israel 19 legal history.
20 Now, when you are human -- active human 21 rights lawyer, you cannot speak about cases that 22 you won the case only, and (inaudible) maybe when

119
1 you retire, you speak about only winning cases, 2 but when you're still active, you have to 3 remember the victim of the lost cases first. And 4 I will start with that, (inaudible).
5 And one of the victims of this case met 6 me before we enter -- before we started this, and 7 he sat here, his name Morhad Asani (phonetic).
8 In the end, he was a fellow, lawyer fellow in 9 this program in 2000 to 2003.
10 He came here, he was lawyer in 11 (inaudible). After he came back from the program 12 the second year, he got back to Abir (phonetic).
13 Abir lived in (inaudible) in Bethlehem. She was 14 teaching in Bethlehem University. Immediately
15 passed law in Israel that there is no anymore
16 Palestinian family unification in Israel.
17 That's mean that she cannot live with 18 Morhad (phonetic) in Israel. Morhad Israeli 19 Palestinian citizen. She is a Palestinian
20 resident of (inaudible). Both Morhad and Abir
21 lived under Israel regime, but Israel regime 22 consider that was like as another entity,

1 although it's under its power.
2 So, we challenged this case, and me and 3 her were the leading lawyers in this case, and 4 was one of the most debated cases -- in fact, it 5 is the most debated cases in Israel legal 6 history. It divided the hall half and half. We 7 lost the case six by five.
8 And of course we argued that there's no
9 country in the world that prohibit its citizens
10 for family unification, at least for the spouse 11 or first-degree relatives (inaudible). At that 12 time, I contact Herman, and Herman was also one 13 of the people in -- here in this country, and 14 many American professors were worried about this 15 law.
16 I contact him to consult about having 17 international expert opinions about different 18 countries, in order to bring it before the court, 19 and he recommended to us -- I went to professor 20 from South Africa to give expert opinion about 21 the law in South Africa, during apartheid and 22 after. And also recommended us to contact one of 121

1 the legal division in OSI, the justice
2 initiative, that they can also provide expert 3 opinions about different countries.
4 And really, we found that there is no
5 country had such a law like that, even during the 6 apartheid. One of the cases that they came 7 before the court of the apartheid, was about 8 family unification between a black man and woman, 9 wife, husband, that they live in (inaudible),
10 what they call (inaudible) areas, and Justice, 11 then, Richard Goldstone say that apartheid has 12 never meant to prohibit family unification, and 13 they exited the case.
14 So, we have then very strong argument
15 in this case. Last sentence that I said to the 16 panel, which was 11 Justices, headed by President 17 of the Chief Justice, Aram Barak, who voted 18 against the law, I said, Honor, if you accept our 19 petition, nothing will be changed in Israel law, 20 we'll continue in the same status quo.
21 But all of us, we have to know that if 22 we, the petitioner, lose the case today, of

1 course we don't lose, justice will be lost, but 2 the law will be changed only. And in fact, the 3 law of Tangat (phonetic) was changed totally.
4 Racist laws after one after the other started to 5 come to target Palestinian citizen of Israel, in 6 all (inaudible) of life, and we're still 7 struggling.
8 Now, I met before I entered, Morhad
9 Asani. Morhad, we lost his case, so what he 10 could do? He and his wife, Abir, couldn't live 11 in Israel. So, he choose -- he chose the thing 12 that I wanted to do as a fellow, but I did that 13 not because I was forced to do. I wanted to do 14 that, but because I was (inaudible).
15 So, he decided to come here to American 16 University, and to continue PhD, with hope that 17 within that time the law would be changed, 18 because the law was called temporary law. And 19 now I met him, and he said, after 20 years, we're 20 still here, struggling in our life. No American 21 citizenship, and no Israeli citizenship for his 22 wife, and she cannot come back.

123

1 And like he told me about this 2 difficulties, and he was one of the petitions of 3 this case. So, this is why I couldn't, without 4 mentioning this case is one of the most in human,
5 crucial cases that we lost. If I want to speak 6 about winning cases, of course we had win.
7 One of the most influential case, also 8 constitutional law, that we won, that was in 2002 9 (inaudible). It was two years almost before the 10 loss of the family unification case. The 11 Attorney General of Israel, his name Liachim 12 Robich (phonetic), then, and he became Supreme 13 Court justice, asked to disqualify Arab political 14 party, and to prohibit El Torran (phonetic) for 15 the election.
16 Why? Because this, Arab political 17 party, advocate for a state for all of its 18 citizens. And in Israel, as a Jewish state, it's 19 not allowed. Israel is a for the Jewish people, 20 it's not liberal democracy. It's not like any 21 other Western (inaudible). It's for Jews only.
22 So, you cannot ask Israel and advocate,

1 even through democratic means, through 2 (inaudible), for a state for all of its citizen.
3 Now, he relied on law, basic law, article seven 4 of the basic law of the (inaudible), which said, 5 no political party or candidate is allowed to 6 negate the definition of Israel as Jewish and 7 democratic state.
8 So, he said, Jewish and democratic 9 state mean that it's state for Jewish people.
10 It's democratic in that, that treat the 11 individuals, all the individuals, equal, but 12 there's no equality based on group rights that I 13 and Jews, as two different groups, are equal.
14 There is no.
15 And no equality in citizenship, because 16 we have law (inaudible). No equality in 17 language, because the Hebrew should be the 18 central language of the Jewish state. So, this 19 political party should be disqualified.
20 Now, if he won that case, no other will 21 participate in the election of (inaudible), and 22 today we can say that after that experience, that

127

1 Arabs, or Palestinian citizens, they are not 2 participating in the election. Now, which was 3 very, very difficult guesswork.

4 Why? Because the law is clear. The 5 law is really saying that if you advocate for a 6 state for all of its citizen, it's against the 7 notion of Israel as Jewish and democratic state.

8 So, I had to get interpretation from the law,
9 that the court could accept it.

10 So, I suggested that if political party
11 recognized the right of Israeli Jews for self-12 determination in this country, so it should be 13 allowed. But you cannot prohibit political 14 party, just because it's advocate for a state for 15 all of its citizens.

16 And in fact, Honor -- it was also,
17 again, before 11 Justices. We are lucky all of 18 our cases (inaudible), in order to win big or to 19 lose big. And Honor, if I lose the case today, 20 you will be the first judge in the modern history 21 that prohibit political party to run for 22 election, just because its agenda is liberal,

126

1 political, democratic agenda. Just because of 2 that.

3 And again, we brought something
4 similar, but like in other countries that show 5 that even oppressed regimes didn't have that. In 6 the end, we won the case by seven Justices,
7 against four. Four said, it's enough that you 8 say states for all of its citizen, that's mean 9 that you are not allowed.

10 And Justice Arim Barak wrote the 11 resolution of majority, and he found different 12 way. He said, the state for all of its citizen 13 negate Israel as a Jewish state. But we have to 14 respect the freedom of expression.

15 In order not to help a political party
16 to run for the election, so the Attorney General 17 must bring serious evidences to show that this 18 political party worked daily and intensively 19 against the factors that constitute Israel as 20 Jewish state.

21 For example, he has to bring evidences
22 to show that this political party had active

1 action against the law for there, or against 2 using Hebrew language. Since the Attorney
3 General didn't have those evidences, we cannot 4 accept his request.

5 So, it was win in that matter, but this 6 issue of the case, it's used every election, by 7 doing this to try to disqualify Arab political 8 party based on the decision of Barak to say,
9 well, we have evidences against the Arab 10 political party that they negate the definition
11 of Israel as Jewish state.

12 Why? Because they had statement
13 against the law for there, they had statement 14 against the Jewish state. And all that time we 15 discussed whether the evidences are relevant or 16 not, or sufficient. So far, I am happy that I 17 didn't lose one of those cases in that.

18 And really, our organization, our staff 19 represent in the last 25 years, in every 20 election, all Arab political parties, and 21 political lists, and those kind of 22 disqualification gets lost, as was in the last

128

1 election, that Likud party, the Netanyahu party
2 asked to disqualify the Arab place, which is the 3 only (inaudible), because its agenda is state for 4 all of its citizen.

5 MS. KADISH: Thank you Hasan. And 6 we're getting a little short on time so last 7 question for Tali.

8 In your work you've bemoaned the 9 failure of the Israeli welfare and criminal 10 justice systems to adequately address the 11 disproportionately high percentage of victimized 12 children. You have called on them to consider 13 restorative injustice in a serious manner and to 14 design, operate and evaluate restorative justice 15 programs and that are attuned to the specific 16 needs, vulnerabilities, and interest of 17 victimized children. So if you could tell us a 18 little bit about that work now?

19 MS. GAL: Thank you. So before coming 20 to the States and also after returning from the 21 Fellowship here, I was working, as I said as a 22 children's rights lawyer in the Israel National

Conducted on September 27, 2019

129

1 Council for the Child. And what I was mainly 2 doing I started and operated the child victim
3 assistance project, through which I escorted 4 children to court and supported them.
5 And then we built a training program
6 and I am no longer there, of course, but there 7 are tens of volunteers now across the country who 8 are escorting children for trial victims in 9 court. And what I remembered from the children 10 and the youth was that they were vulnerable.
11 They were hurt. They were retained, but at the 12 same time they were very strong and they wanted 13 to be heard. And they wanted someone to listen 14 to them.
15 And what I learned again, and again, is 16 that our tendency, adults tendency, professionals 17 tendency to keep the children away, especially 18 the victimized children, to keep them away from 19 the discourse because we don't want to hurt them 20 again.
21 We don't want them to hear, you know,
22 the bad stuff and the bad words or whatever about

130

1 violence, about sexual assaults et cetera, 2 shutting them down and keeping them away from the 3 table actually violated their rights again.
4 Because it takes them away the opportunity to be 5 heard, to be part of a discussion about their own 6 lives.
7 So I was seeing it again and again,
8 children were coming to me wanting to say
9 something to the judge, and if not to the judge, 10 at least to the prosecutor, and if not to the 11 prosecutor at least to the intern. And the 12 system was shutting them down because first of 13 all, they are victims, and victims are not a 14 party.
15 You know there are some -- and that 16 victims' rights (inaudible), well, of which I was 17 a part of the reform that led to that did some 18 things towards victims' rights. So there were 19 some opportunities to submit statements for 20 example. But they were not only victims who are 21 guests, and not always welcome guests, they were 22 also children so they are vulnerable and we want

131

1 to give them a way. So the duality of being a
2 victim and being a child kept them so far away
3 from where things were decided about their own 4 future.
5 So as I said, I started to study
6 restorative justice and I went, I did my PhD in 7 Australia then came back. My family grew during 8 that time and I continued in Kadana (phonetic), I 9 was actually in an intersection debating whether 10 I should establish an organization or establish a 11 program promoting restorative justice for child 12 victims are going to academia, and I chose 13 academia.
14 But I still train practitioners. So I
15 want to talk a little bit about restorative 16 justice just so that people understand what it is 17 and how it is related to human rights. And 18 particularly children's human rights.
19 So imagine you are a victim. I hope
20 none of you is a victim ever, but I imagine you 21 are a victim, let's say of a violent crime, and 22 something bad had already happened to you. But 132

1 now something needs to be happening now because 2 you feel the world has changed and you want 3 justice to be done. And imagine you are and 4 offered an opportunity to meet with your 5 perpetrator.
6 To meet with him, or her, not in court 7 where the perpetrator will defend himself, and 8 not talk to you but talk to the judge. But face-9 to-face in a safe environment where you have your 10 supporters. You choose your own supporters, 11 parents, partner, children, friends, whoever you 12 choose. You come with them, safe, after 13 preparation, to a room. You sit side-by-side to 14 your perpetrator who also comes with his or her 15 supporters. I'll talk in a minute about them.
16 And you have the opportunity to ask
17 questions, why me? Why me is the big question 18 that every victim struggles with. Did I wear
19 something wrong? Did I say something? Was I 20 responsible in any way for the fact that you 21 chose me to hurt me? That's one question that 22 bothers all victims.

133
1 The other one is what exactly happened?
2 What did you think? What did you plan? Why did
3 you do that, and not that? What happened
4 afterwards? What did you think about it later 5 on? Did you feel sorry about what happened? Are 6 you still -- do you understand what happened to 7 me, et cetera. So they want to listen and to 8 hear answers.

9 And the third thing that they want is 10 to tell their stories. Their stories about what 11 happened to them. How they were affected.
12 Victims lives are changed after victimization.
13 It happens in sexual assault, it happens in 14 violent assaults, it happens in all kinds of 15 assaults. Even property crimes change people's 16 lives. And if any of you have been burgled, 17 this is something that you just can't move on 18 without anything happens. So this is the 19 opportunity that is given to the victims.

20 Now, think about yourselves as 21 offenders. As someone who did something wrong.
22 It's been a terrible day, or you have had a

1 terrible life, are you did something really 2 wrong, and even really terrible. You have the 3 opportunity to take responsibility, to say, you 4 know, I did it. You are not pushed into 5 apologizing. This is something actually that 6 comes in naturally. But, you have to acknowledge 7 that this is what you did.

8 You have an opportunity to come and 9 meet your victim. Sometimes it's years after the 10 assault has happened. And you have the 11 opportunity to hear from them what has happened 12 to them. Many offenders come to these 13 conferences not because they want to meet their 14 offender (sic), but because they want some 15 discount in their punishment, or some of them do 16 want to say that they are sorry.

17 In these meetings what we see over and 18 over again, and there are movies now, and there 19 are all kinds, you can look for restorative 20 justice and find many testimonies about it, is 21 that for the first time offenders really 22 understand what they did. Because when the judge

135
1 tells them what you did was wrong, or when a 2 probation officer or when a social worker tells 3 them what you did was wrong, they don't really 4 listen. They are used to having others telling 5 them that they were wrong, and they were horrible 6 people, et cetera.

7 But when they hear the victim telling 8 their story. When they hear their own mother in 9 the room apologizing for the victim's mother for 10 what their son, what her son did, this is 11 something that makes a difference, and it changes 12 people. And you hear it again and again.

13 So this is what I found fascinating,
14 and I thought having children in the room, child 15 victims, would be amazing and will give them the 16 opportunity to be heard that they don't get in 17 court. At the same time, it would be terribly 18 complicated so you know this is something you 19 need to work on. How to do it. How to establish 20 safety. How to make sure that they participate 21 in a way that suits their needs and vulnerability
22 and capabilities. And every case is different.

136
1 So this is what I've been engaged on in 2 research, in training, in writing, and teaching 3 the law.

4 MS. KADISH: Thank you. Thank you,
5 Tali.

6 So we, not surprising, we are over 7 time. It won't shock you to know that. So we 8 have a little bit of a break after so people, 9 unfortunately, I'm sure there are questions.
10 Please feel free to -- I will assume that the 11 panels will be happy for you to approach them and 12 ask questions.

13 But I want to give everyone just a 14 minute, no more than a minute because we are 15 running late. Far be it from me to keep you from 16 your lunch. Just a minute to address Herman 17 directly. Everyone really wanted to do that so 18 we will just go down the line. And Tamar, let's 19 start with you.

20 MS. MORAG: All right. Herman, I'm 21 sorry I can't see you. I'm so excited even from 22 afar to take part in celebrating your very 1 inspiring career.

2 You (inaudible) people I know who are 3 there to look back with the (inaudible) you do, 4 not only on their professional career but on the 5 impact you've had the lives (inaudible). Herman,
6 you are, and have been for me, for years, a 7 model. A model of generosity of (inaudible) with 8 them. A never-ending passion recruiting the 9 world. You personify a unique and rare 10 combination of a commanding (inaudible) of the 11 highest caliber and an ability to translate it 12 into real world results.

13 All of this is coupled with exceptional 14 personal works. Look at it today, diversity of 15 causes you've worked for over the years and your 16 ability to constantly find new and exciting 17 challenges in this work. It seems that no human 18 rights cause is actually foreign or irrelevant to 19 you. And I think this is one of the things that 20 enabled you to form such strong connections with 21 (inaudible) of such wide-ranging interest.

22 Every time we've met over the years

1 I've always enjoyed meeting with you, your 2 curiosity, your true interest in so many 3 (inaudible). And I'm always touched by your 4 sincere interest in everything I do.

5 Herman, thank you. Thank you so much 6 for your significant role you've had in my 7 career, for your constant support and good
8 advice. I am beyond mentioning grateful to you.
9 I wish you a wonderful retirement and look 10 forward so much to seeing you and Mary here
11 (inaudible).

12 MS. KADISH: Thank you Tamar. And Dan.

13 MR. YAKIR: My main regret from the 14 year I stayed here in Washington was never, ever 15 (inaudible) student. It was while you were on 16 sabbatical in the year of '88, '89 so I didn't 17 have the opportunity to study with you. But you 18 were ever present at the with aid, and good 19 advice and arranging whatever internship we 20 wanted.

21 And the first internship I wanted was 22 the one for the local chapter of the ACLU here in

1 Washington. And the most embarrassing moment of 2 my -- one of the most embarrassing moments of my 3 professional life was that the ACLU asked for a 4 writing sample to submit to be accepted as an 5 intern.

6 And somehow I was thinking of 7 handwriting sample because it was very well 8 (inaudible) in Israel to screen candidates for 9 employment with graphologists. And it sounded
10 somewhat bizarre to me why the ACLU would use 11 graphology. But I thought I wasn't in a position
12 to argue about it. So I sat down and copied 10 13 lines from the Daily Washington Post with my 14 finest handwriting and faxed them the sheet.

15 And I am embarrassed to this day to 16 tell it. And suddenly it dawned onto me what a 17 mistake I had made. But a few days after it I
18 was told to come, on Sunday, on Monday at 9:00
19 a.m. and start my internship. And when I came I 20 was so embarrassed I decided, (inaudible) said 21 don't mention it.

22 And why am I embarrassing myself to 140

1 tell it to you today? Just to show that the 2 words from Herman take for instance an intern was 3 enough and I had to go through the motion and ask 4 for a writing sample but probably they didn't 5 even bother to read it and they just accepted me.

6 And the rest is history. This is -- I mean one 7 example of the stature of Herman and his 8 influence and how he got us any internship we 9 wanted.

10 And I am grateful for this opportunity, 11 for the good advice, for the friendship, for the 12 love you have for Israel and for its prosperity 13 and for its democracy and for progressive human 14 rights. And I wish you all the best and good 15 health to you and Mary.

16 MS. KADISH: Tali.

17 MS. GAL: So I was asking myself why is 18 it that I love Herman so much that I would come 19 to here all the way. And not only that just why 20 do I feel this way? And I think Herman has this 21 combination of being tough and meticulous. I 22 remember you corrected my English in ways that

1 others would not have dared to do.
2 And the constitutional law class was 3 tough, was really hard and I loved it. Because 4 you know you challenged me, you pushed me and 5 others I think forward the whole time. And what 6 I learned from you is that this is tough love.
7 This is when you love someone and when you care
8 about someone you put your effort into making 9 them better; making them more knowledgeable, more 10 exact, more accurate and this is something that 11 I've learned from you, and I cherish that you 12 have that and that you taught me that.
13 And I also wanted to say that Herman is 14 the youngest person I know. Because you are 15 always so curious. Just to see you and Mary, 16 I'll say a word about Mary with people will allow 17 me to. Just to see you reading papers together, 18 getting angry about -- and there is a lot to be 19 angry about these days -- and asking questions 20 and looking at things to think about, and 21 discussing politics and art, and nature, and 22 literature, and poetry. This is for me this is

142

1 being young. And this is something that I'm also 2 learning for me and I hope that I will stay
3 young, not as much as you are but a little bit.
4 And the last thing I wanted to say is 5 to Mary. That Herman, you have a match. And 6 it's been wonderful and I adopted both of you as 7 parents, so thank you both.
8
9 MS. KADISH: Hasan?
10 MR. JABAREEN: I think Herman, you 11 didn't think in the past that you will be the 12 most influential person for establishing the 13 leading Palestinian human right organization at 14 all.
15 And really, without you, your advice, I 16 don't think that this organization could be 17 established at that time. So I think this is my 18 self to say (inaudible). And always I, not just 19 me, also Rina that I know her through my stay 20 here and this program, and she came with me and 21 we got married and established and (inaudible)
22 together.

143

1 Also, I think both of us know that
2 without you, Herman, we couldn't do that and I am 3 sure that I am not who I am now without your 4 advice. So to say thank you, grateful, I don't 5 think that they can express this. And if there 6 is in our (inaudible) something that (inaudible)
7 father beyond the (inaudible) father or -- I mean
8 emotionally I think that always not just me.
9 Also many of our staff refer to you as the 10 father. The father of the founders of the 11 organization and the father in the meeting as the 12 model. They are so -- that always when help and 13 good and give the good advice. And always he is 14 optimistic.
15 Even during the wars when we called him 16 he was optimistic. And when we sometimes we have 17 a moments that we are down and we say, oh father, 18 what does it deserve anything because one more 19 can destroy what we achieve. Immediately you 20 start to bring us aspects of American history, 21 (inaudible) history and the second (inaudible)
22 arise. One of his (inaudible) all that are

144

1 trying to choose one of those historical moment 2 in our modern history in the straining for human 3 rights in order to give you more hope and more 4 energy.
5 Now, we are going to meet tomorrow for 6 lunch. And I am going to discuss with him many 7 things. What we would do with other cases.
8 Because the retirement is just official here.
9 And in fact, I look at him I had idea that I 10 would suggest that me and Danny here, tomorrow we 11 consult with him and will take the case of Morat
12 and to go back to the Supreme Court and change 13 the law because the law was supposed to be a 14 temporary law and we lost because the majority 15 say it is a temporary law.
16 And then we bring it and it we say
17 after 20 years it's not temporary. So I think I 18 am continue to discuss with him on tomorrow.
19 We love you, Herman, and when I say we,
20 also not just me and Rina, and also Herman even 21 the human (inaudible) it's not just (inaudible).
22 He took care for our wedding that will be before

1 the new Supreme Court before Justice Ruth 2 Ginsberg. And in fact, if Dan contributed to the 3 American legal history through that footnote, me 4 and Rina contribute (inaudible). Our wedding was 5 the last wedding before Justice of the U.S.
6 Supreme Court of persons who are not first degree 7 relatives.

8 Because when we got our married the 9 (inaudible) was against Supreme Court to U.S. why 10 every American citizen would have this authority?
11 So they decided that this would be just for 12 first degree persons that they have (inaudible)
13 to a judge.

14 Thank you for everything and see you 15 tomorrow.

17 MS. KADISH: Thank you. Thank you
18 everyone. And to the panelists, thank you. To 19 Herman, thank you for me personally for everyone 20 who was involved in this fellowship and made it 21 possible. And now all I need to say to you is 22 you go out this door to get lunch, and you come

1 conversation with two men who are each imminent 2 in their own right and through their 3 contributions to human rights and other spheres.
4 And who are here, more importantly, because they 5 are eminently well-qualified to talk about some 6 of Herman's influence in the field as we've 7 already heard, but also in their own careers, and 8 on Claudio's part in the law school community 9 that organize this.

10 I want to say that when I talked to 11 Herman a week or so ago about this program I 12 mentioned to him that I was trying to think about 13 a theme that kind of unified all the disparate 14 fields in which he has had an impact. And he 15 immediately, his first instinct was to say don't 16 even try that, Diane. Don't even try to find a 17 unifying theme.

18 And I want to find his words. He said
19 the problem with seeking coherence through 20 unifying themes is that there isn't any. So in 21 Herman's own view, he does kind of stumble
22 accidentally from one impactful area to another.

8 LUNCHEON CONVERSATION

9 THE CONTRIBUTIONS OF PROFESSOR HERMAN SCHWARTZ
10 TO HUMAN RIGHTS AND THE RULE OF LAW

11 MR. LAGUARDA: Welcome back everyone.
12 Welcome back and thank you for taking your seats
13 with your lunch. We are ready to begin our lunch 14 program. Thank you. And I would ask Professor 15 Orentlicher, please proceed with the panel 16 discussion.

17 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: It's really a
18 great honor to be able to participate in any way 19 in celebrating Herman Schwartz, about whom we've 20 heard so much, and (inaudible) the purpose of why 21 we esteem and adore Herman so much.

22 I'm really happy to help facilitate a

1 He went from being an antitrust lawyer to an 2 imminent activist in fields as disparate as 3 social justice, voting rights, prison reform, I'm 4 leaving out a ton of them. Comparative 5 constitutionalism of course, and on and on and 6 on.

7 But then, upon reflection, it's obvious
8 that there are some unifying things and I hope 9 that they will kind of come out a little bit more 10 strongly in this conversation. The most obvious 11 one is that notion of scholar as activist. And 12 Herman is not just a scholar who is an activist, 13 but he is an imminent scholar as somebody on the 14 previous panel noted. He is esteemed, and 15 rightly so, for his rigorous, and influential, 16 and insightful scholarship. And he is not just 17 an activist but, as we all know here and have 18 heard already, he has been amazingly influential 19 across an astonishing range of fields.

20 I am going to refer you to the bio for 21 this program for further background on our two 22 guests who are, as I said, and as I think

149
1 everybody here knows enormously influential, and 2 renowned, deservedly so in their own right. I
3 will briefly say Claudio Grossman is Senior 4 Emeritus of the Washington College of Law.
5 And he too has played, like Herman has 6 played, myriad leadership roles in many different 7 forums. In the field of human rights, and more 8 broadly in the field of public international law.
9 His contributions have been recognized in his 10 appointment to myriad influential positions, 11 including relatively recently, his appointment to 12 the International Law Commission of the United 13 Nations.
14 More relevant for this gathering, he 15 has been a key figure in Herman's life as a 16 colleague. I guess originally as a junior 17 colleague, and then later as his dean. But has 18 been a comrade in arms with Herman over decades.
19 Aryeh Neier, also really needs no
20 introduction but is now president emeritus of the 21 Open Society Foundation where he was the founding 22 president from 1993 to 2012. Before that, for 12

150
1 years he was the executive director of Human 2 Rights Watch. And before that, he was the 3 national director of ACLU. Then again, I could 4 go on and on, but you get the idea.
5 I mentioned earlier, that there in 6 fact, some through lines in Herman's life and one
7 of them actually is Aryeh, so I'm going to turn
8 to Aryeh first. And I'll first say that when I 9 was chatting with Herman a week ago, he said to 10 me and I'm going to quote here, "Aryeh has been 11 the key figure in my life in terms of the human 12 rights work. Aryeh has been crucial -- pause -- 13 absolutely crucial. I followed Aryeh wherever he 14 went."
15 So I want to start by turning to Aryeh
16 to talk about some of the place you and Herman 17 went together, and ask you a sort of broad 18 question about reflecting on some key respects in 19 which Herman has been especially influential and 20 impactful in an area where you were involved with 21 him.
22 Mr. NEIER: Well, I wouldn't say

151
1 that -- is this on?
2 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: I think you
3 have to press it.
4 MR. NEIER: I wouldn't say that Herman
5 followed me. I would say that I did my best to 6 enlist Herman in the various activities in which 7 I was engaged, and he was quite willing to take 8 part in those activities.
9 As you noted, I divided my career into 10 three institutions, the ACLU, Human Rights Watch
11 and the Open Society Foundations. And I think 12 Herman is the only scholar activist who I have 13 collaborated with closely in all three of those 14 institutions. Scholar activists play immensely 15 important roles in all three institutions, but 16 Herman, as I say, was the person that I always 17 turned to to work with me on various matters.
18 When I got to know Herman in the ACLU, 19 Herman was already an established figure in the 20 ACLU. He was a lawyer, or a law professor at the 21 University of New York in Buffalo, active in what 22 had been called the Niagara Frontier, an 152

1 affiliate of the ACLU. And when I became the 2 director of the New York Civil Liberties Union, I 3 was able to merge the Niagara Frontier branch of 4 the ACLU and other chapters that the ACLU had 5 around New York State into a single statewide New 6 York Civil Liberties Union.
7 And by the time I got to know Herman he 8 was established as the ACLU voice on electronic 9 eavesdropping, wiretapping, and other forms of 10 electronic eavesdropping, and he was involved in 11 the litigation on such matters as a desegregation 12 of the schools in Buffalo New York. So he was 13 dealing with a very important matters.
14 The issue on which I particularly got 15 to know Herman and work with Herman on was the 16 prisoners' rights issue. And I think it's 17 necessary to think back to the 1960s to 18 understand why that was such a revolutionary 19 issue in that period. Essentially, the law had 20 been that prisoners were civilly dead. That they 21 did not have rights.
22 But in the 1960s there were at least

153

1 two new classes of prisoners who challenged that 2 idea. First, there was the black Muslim 3 prisoners, those who had converted to Islam under 4 the leadership of Elijah Mohammed. And many of 5 them were in prison; a lot of the recruiting took 6 place in prison. And they wanted their own
7 worship services, and they didn't want to eat
8 pork. And so they began to ask for rights.
9 And another category of prisoners that 10 was new in that. Were the -- those who had 11 rejected participation in the Vietnam War. They 12 had sometimes applied for conscientious objection
13 and were turned down for conscientious objection.
14 Then they were people very much concerned about 15 rights. Among other things, they wanted to get 16 certain periodicals in prison. And the 17 periodicals ranged from Playboy to the New York
18 review of books. And those prisoners also began 19 to assert rights during that period.
20 So new classes of prisoners were very 21 important in creating an interest in the idea of 22 prisoner's rights. And Herman was at the State

154

1 University in Buffalo, and there was a nearby
2 prison 30 miles away, Attica State Prison. And 3 Herman began litigating on behalf of the 4 prisoners confined at Attica.
5 I can recall that in 1969, 50 years
6 ago, two years before the Attica riot Herman 7 called me one day and said that he thought he 8 would be able to get permission to establish an 9 office within Attica prison. And that way have 10 the prisoners have direct access to him on an 11 ongoing basis. And with the New York Civil 12 Liberties Union sponsor that effort and also, I 13 suppose, pay the costs, whatever was involved.
14 Herman very often look to me as a sort
15 of source of money bags. I was the person to go 16 and finance the various things in which he 17 engaged. But I said yes. We would do it. Well, 18 he didn't get permission to establish an office 19 in Attica. Maybe history would've been a little 20 bit different if he had been able to do so. But 21 he stayed very much involved in the litigation in 22 Attica. And of course, played a very important

155

1 role if ultimately an unsuccessful role, when the 2 prisoners took over the prison. But when 3 Governor Rockefeller, in effect, ordered a
4 massacre of the prison.
5 By the way, if you haven't read it,
6 there was a book published about three years ago
7 by Heather Ann Thompson, Blood in the Water, on 8 the Attica prison riot. And half a century, or 9 nearly half a century after the riots she manages 10 to bring the entire thing to life in an 11 extraordinary way. It is a riveting book to 12 read, and I recommend it highly.
13 But Herman, in my career at the ACLU
14 was involved in a variety of issues, but 15 prisoner's rights were at the forefront. And 16 when I became the national director of the ACLU, 17 I wanted to establish a national prison project,
18 and was ultimately able to do so, and asked 19 Herman to be the chair of the national prison 20 project, because this was something that were 21 going to use to challenge prison conditions all 22 over the United States.

1 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: I want to come
2 back a little bit later after I first turned to 3 Claudio to ask you to follow up on how Herman's 4 vision of prison reform affected your own
5 approach at ACLU. But first, just take really 6 quick follow up on your assistance to Herman and 7 financing some of his prison reform work. Now, I 8 happen to know that one of the places you helped 9 him get money was from the Playboy Foundation.
10 MR. NEIER: Yes.
11 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: So I want to 12 ask, did Herman receive any other benefits from 13 the Playboy Foundation?
14 MR. NEIER: Well, let me tell you what 15 happened there. I was chosen as the ACLU
16 director in 1970. It was a contested election.
17 The selection committee had divided and I won by 18 the landslide majority of 35 to 32, so I became 19 the ACLU director on that basis.
20 And a day or two later, after the 21 stories were in the newspaper I got a call from a 22 friend of mine in Chicago, a lawyer named Bert

7 MR. NEIER: Okay.	7 MR. GROSSMAN: Well, I share with Aryeh
8 Mr. SCHWARTZ: I got two copies, not	8 a couple of things too; being seen as a source of 9 one, but two copies of Playboy for a period of, I	9 resources when I was the Dean. But I am
10 don't know -- I'm not quite sure when it stopped.	10 resenting the fact that I was not made part of
11 MR. NEIER: What I don't remember,	11 this Playboy situation. And I wasn't aware of 12 Herman, is among other things the Playboy	12 it. I think since it was as source for the 13 Foundation organized a conference on prisoner's	13 (inaudible) contributions to the course of human
14 rights at the Playboy mansion. I did not go to	14 rights, I think that law schools have a very lot
15 that, but did you go?	15 by not being a part of it. But people in the law
16 MS. SCHWARTZ: Yeah.	16 school created by Whitman, as you know, in 1996.
17 MR. SCHWARTZ: I went, Mary went and my	17 But let me say when I think of Herman,
18 mother-in-law came.	18 the first thing that I think of is solidarity.
19 (Laughter)	19 And I would -- that's sometimes the words lose
20 MR. NEIER: The truth is that there are	20 meaning by the fact that we repeat them. And we
21 a number of stories about what took place at that	21 are having -- we've had concepts to (inaudible)
22 event.	22 to a structure. And for me the word solidarity

1 has special meaning because I was a political 2 refugee from Chile, for being (inaudible). And 3 when I came to this country as a full ride,
4 visiting scholar from the Netherlands. I living 5 in the Netherlands ten years. I had there the 6 (inaudible) scholarship, one way, no return as 7 you can understand.

8 Well, this professor in constitutional
9 law he came from (inaudible) became for me a 10 place for human solidarity. A place where you 11 can go, talk, always his door was open. To 12 discuss about the humane and the divine. Not 13 about the (inaudible) any of this (inaudible).
14 But it had a meaning; it was a tremendous 15 personal meaning. A domain where we could talk 16 and ask everything.

17 And when you would feel enriched after 18 talking to him. And how would you feel enriched?
19 For example in the rule of law. You know, the 20 rule of law as an instrument of change, as a 21 value in itself, that's -- it was (inaudible)
22 claims in the legal matter. It was always a

162

1 talking and Herman was involved in that.
2 I would tell you that in law schools
3 it's not normal to (inaudible). Law schools have 4 a different normal than one in (inaudible) in 5 many ways. No professors do not acquire 6 reputation on the basis of attracting grants. No 7 law professors tend to be -- the destiny of their 8 success is measured more in terms of their legal 9 reputation that instead of working with others, 10 like (inaudible).

11 And that's fine. I'm not really 12 (inaudible) in any way, but Herman definitely 13 what he saw (inaudible) the country was 14 (inaudible). In terms of the creation of 15 (inaudible) that would unite people for the 16 purpose of achieving a better world on the basis 17 of the legal (inaudible) and the legal narrative 18 by using (inaudible) the national instrument.

19 And that is the story of the creation 20 of the Center for Human Rights. The Center For 21 Human Rights that lead the space for students in 22 January of every year, as a matter of a fact, to 163

1 see for them a possibility to contribute with the 2 legal -- with the legal (inaudible) better 3 proposition.

4 And the Center is a creation in which 5 if Herman would not have been here it would not 6 have taken place. And he was the person that in 7 charge of the -- he was in charge of the Center.
8 And the Center (inaudible) things for students.
9 It created a space for (inaudible) litigation,
10 many (inaudible). And we mention that Herman 11 gave an example of his own (inaudible) to make a
12 (inaudible).

13 This school is a school where we 14 participated in the Laskis case and cases 15 involving indigent population, in the keeping of 16 children in what they (inaudible). He is using 17 more the American system on top of the board in 18 women rights, and in the community has tortured 19 some of us decided cases that established that 20 (inaudible) was a form of torture. That was 21 (inaudible) about that. But the (inaudible)
22 human trade member or even a (inaudible) to delay

164

1 torture.

2 So a government embody solidarity, not 3 only in terms of abstract policies that needed to 4 be pursued but the (inaudible) of the States.
5 Nothing wrong with that, but personally in 6 expressing warmth, affection, and creating a 7 space where everyone could go and talk with him.

8 And he's because in terms of the law
9 school -- you know what will be enough? I mean 10 the creation of the program in Israel? Imagine 11 what meant that, no (inaudible). Not (inaudible) 12 right. And also I think that would have been 13 enough.

14 And then the participating in the 15 creation of a center of human rights that will 16 promote worldwide policies of tolerance and 17 policies that based on the rule of law.

18 Let me finish by saying also in my 19 experience in cases about (inaudible) the fate of 20 (inaudible) experience in my own life and also 21 having been in (inaudible) and (inaudible) to 22 have an kind of -- convening a special paper --

1 one thing that happened is that the validation of 2 rights.

3 The thing that they are (inaudible), we 4 cannot refresh them from what is the right
5 conduct disappears. There is no (inaudible)
6 women that think (inaudible) that wrote a book 7 called the La Fiesta in (inaudible). And 8 (inaudible) knowing about the (inaudible) the 9 detainer in (inaudible). And in that knowledge, 10 a person working the (inaudible) agencies of 11 Trujilia (phonetic) have lost his favor. So he 12 decides to give to Trujilia his young daughter to 13 be raised by Chuhilo. And what I felt impressing 14 in the (inaudible) by Joseph is it appeared the 15 normal thing to do.

16 Normal became abuse, bullying,
17 violation of rights and for me when I thinking
18 Herman, I thinking someone who (inaudible), 19 projected (inaudible) and did not accept what was 20 abnormal as normal.

21 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: Thank you. I
22 already indicated that I was going to follow up

166

1 with this question, but I'm going to repeat it, 2 which is, and Claudio, you sort of started to 3 touch on this. Beyond his impact out there in 4 the world, in so many difference spheres Herman 5 has influenced the way so many of us think about 6 issues. Has helped us reframe our own
7 understanding of what is possible to do, right?

8 And so I wonder if I could turn to you, 9 and maybe Aryeh first again, to talk about the 10 ways in which Herman's approach to issues kind of 11 opened up new possibilities in your mind?

12 MR. NEIER: Well, the idea of 13 protecting rights within prisons influenced me in 14 the following way, that I began to think about 15 other institutions in which people did not have 16 rights. And where rights were off limits. And 17 it made me think in terms of mental hospitals; in 18 terms of institutions for the developmentally
19 disabled, juvenile institutions, and the schools 20 and the armed forces, in the military.

21 I always regretted that I never 22 significantly got to extend that to nursing

1 homes, which were in a sense voluntary
2 institutions, but for a lot of the people
3 actually live the in the nursing homes they were 4 not so voluntary.

5 But over a period of time at the ACLU I 6 was able to launch efforts dealing with all of 7 those kinds of institutions, other than nursing 8 homes, and I used to refer to them as enclaves in 9 which people did not have rights. And people who 10 knew me in that. At the ACLU always associated 11 the idea of dealing with enclaves with my own 12 role at the ACLU. But the effort of dealing with 13 prisons preceded the other efforts and had a very 14 large influence in the way in which I went to 15 about addressing those issues during my tenure at 16 the ACLU.

17 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: Thank you.
18 That's so impressive. Those of us of a certain 19 age here understand how, you know, 30 years ago 20 there really was a narrow understanding of what 21 counted as human rights that were enforceable.
22 And I remember when I was a full-time human

168

1 rights lawyers in the 1980s frequently been 2 puzzled about why we only talked about political 3 prisoners and not other prisoners, and Herman 4 just took it on.

5 He didn't just ask why aren't we doing 6 this, he just went for it and help to reframe our 7 understanding of where human rights applied. We 8 heard some more about that this morning. So it's 9 a super important impact.

10 Claudio, do you want to address that?

11 MR. GROSSMAN: I think that the role 12 that the institution increases. I think it's 13 something that very much inspired many of us, if 14 not all of us.

15 As you mentioned a lot of attention
16 have been focused in the (inaudible) community on 17 the situation on political prisoners. But it was 18 also the torture in some countries, political 19 prisoners because they come at prisoner with 20 torture. So it was very important to understand 21 in a holistic way the situation of prisoners.
22 And when I was in the (inaudible) commission and

Transcript of Symposium
Conducted on September 27, 2019

169

1 the committee against torture, I was not there 2 when the key thing is the (inaudible) made by 3 Herman. The key thing was, for lack of a better 4 word, to let the (inaudible) the side, basically,
5 of prisoners. Let us see the topic of prisons as 6 a whole.

7 MR. NEIER: If I can tell a story on 8 that. It involves your country, Chile, and one 9 of my colleagues had paid a visit to Chile and 10 had visited a regional branch of the non-11 governmental organization, the Chilean Commission
12 on Human Rights and --

13 MR. GROSSMAN: In (inaudible).

14 Mr. NEIER: Yes. And in talking to the 15 leader of that branch of the Chilean Commission, 16 he was told that things had improved, that there 17 had been only a couple of the cases of torture
18 during the past year. And my colleague asked 19 doesn't that include the common prisoners? And 20 the answer was oh no, they all get tortured. He 21 was talking about the political prisoners.

22 And, you know, an organization like

170

1 Amnesty International was formed to deal with 2 prisoners of conscious and in its early years 3 didn't deal with common prisoners. When we 4 created Human Rights Watch one of the founding
5 ideas of Human Rights Watch is that we would not 6 make that distinction, that we would be concerned 7 not only with the people who were in prison for 8 reasons of conscious, or for political reasons, 9 but we would deal with all prisoners.

10 And Amnesty, over time, shifted its 11 policy as well. And for many years now has dealt 12 with all prisoners. But one needed to make that 13 shift.

14 MR. GROSSMAN: Yeah, and to go on 15 (inaudible) I think that was important for me
16 with Herman, is the role of constitutionalism.
17 The role of the Constitution. Even if Herman 18 himself did not believe that the model of the 19 U.S. Constitution was somebody that could be at 20 adopted by other countries, you know, he would go 21 to some countries, I think there was an 22 expectation of those who did not know Herman that

171

1 he would try to install the same way of thinking
2 in another country.

3 No. But there was an idea of 4 constitutional is some that it was not only 5 embodied in the U.S. Constitution, and I think 6 that was very important to me in many ways. For 7 example, in the issue of emergency situations, 8 are in the topic of freedom of expression, but 9 that there was a something that was essential 10 here that was independent, impartial, competent 11 tribunal.

12 And I would say this. As you mentioned 13 earlier if this fact that a person is a prisoner, 14 the person is a prisoner when we attempt to 15 establish special categories of people that are 16 treated differently and special types of 17 tribunals, that's really what all of us want. I 18 mean if there was something important in this 19 idea of constitutionalism, this idea of the 20 separation of power, and this idea of a court and 21 court said that are independent and that deal 22 with all the situation. And I think that that --

172

1 and finally, let me say also, the role of 2 (inaudible). Not dealing up. I think that all 3 these values are not only in a paper. They are 4 the natural expression that says that paper has 5 patience. You can put in an opinion in the 6 newspaper, but they replace expectations of human 7 (inaudible) of living decently. And the power 8 goes well beyond simply the fact that they are in 9 (inaudible).

10 And I think what a very important thing
11 for what Herman stands for and inspires other 12 people.

13 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: I wanted to ask 14 each of you to reflect, if you can, because it's 15 fascinating to hear what Herman is light, in kind 16 of a more intimate sphere of collegiality. My 17 guess is that Herman was forthright in telling 18 you when he disagreed with you?

19 MR. SCHWARTZ: Yes.

20 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: And didn't 21 mince words about it. So I wonder if you could 22 talk about how he approach that, because my

Transcript of Symposium
Conducted on September 27, 2019

44 (173 to 176)

173
1 experience with Herman was that you could be just 2 adamantly in disagreement. Just, you know, he's 3 here and you are here and he would turn it into 4 an invitation and invite me to disagree with him
5 in the Washington Post. But I can't even 6 remember which side you are on in which side I
7 was on. But many years ago you did an op Ed
8 piece, and I disagreed with it and you said, well 9 let me help publish a taking exception piece.
10 And so I did.

11 So let me give you a tee off. What 12 about economic and social rights? Did he -- 13 Mr. NEIER: Okay. Well, Herman and I
14 disagree on the subject of economic and social 15 rights. I am a advocate of limiting the 16 international human rights efforts to a focus on 17 civil and political rights. And Herman takes the 18 opposite point of view, but Herman invited me 19 here to this law school and we debated on the 20 subject and the law school published an account 21 of our disagreement.

22 And I have seen that particular account

174
1 of our disagreement quoted and reprinted in a 2 good many places. So that's what I -- Herman was 3 always blunt. Herman was a very clear when he 4 didn't agree with me on something. And he was, 5 you know, quite vigorous and expressing his 6 disagreement. Not rude, but vigorous.

7 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: Claudio?

8 MR. GROSSMAN: He always agreed with 9 me. At some cost.

10 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: So maybe
11 following up on your comment.

12 So fill in the blank here. I always 13 find myself smiling when I remember the time
14 Herman, blank.

15 MR. NEIER: Okay. In the early days in 16 which I sought funding for Herman's work on 17 prison matters, I got report from a consortium of 18 small foundations in New York. And I had a very 19 friendly relationship with the woman who directed 20 that consortium of small foundations.

21 And when I approached her for funding 22 for Herman's work on prisoner's rights she was

175
1 very receptive, but she said she thought Herman
2 should consult with, and I won't name the name, 3 but she named a prominent legal scholar. In 4 fact, he was the Dean of a leading law school,
5 and she suggested that Herman should consult him
6 about the project.

7 So I didn't know the person. I knew
8 his name, but I hadn't met him. And I repeated
9 that to Herman. Herman's response to me was why 10 should I consult that horse's ass? And later on, 11 I had another conversation with the foundation
12 director, and she repeated the request that I 13 should have Herman consult that to prominent 14 legal scholar.

15 And I was indiscrete and I repeated
16 Herman's comment to her. And then there was 17 silence on the other end of the phone for a 18 little bit. And then she informed me that she 19 was about to get married to him.

20 MR. SCHWARTZ: (inaudible) yeah.

21 MR. NEIER: I should say that the, as 22 memory serves me, I think the grant was made and 176

1 I remained her friend for many years until she 2 died. Her husband predeceased her, but she and I
3 worked together on various projects over a period
4 of time.

5 MR. SCHWARTZ: I would add she forgave
6 me for this. Because as it happened, her brother 7 was a contemporary of mine in college and she 8 knew me --

9 MR. NEIER: Was that her former 10 husband?

11 MS. SCHWARTZ: No, her brother.

12 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: Brother.

13 MR. SCHWARTZ: Her brother was my 14 contemporary. However, some people are very, 15 very forgiving because years later when we had 16 the international prison project people went 17 around interviewing and looking at prisons around 18 the world. The two of them volunteered to do a 19 report on Indonesia.

20 MR. NEIER: Indonesia. Yeah, I
21 remember that.

22 MR. SCHWARTZ: To which they were going

1 on this person's sabbatical.
2 MR. NEIER: I think it was published in 3 The New Republic.
4 MR. SCHWARTZ: I didn't know that.
5 MR. NEIER: Yeah.
6 MR. SCHWARTZ: So that some people are 7 really (inaudible) of gaps of various kinds.
8 MR. NEIER: Well, it was my fault to 9 repeat your comment.
10 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: So you just 11 witnessed some restorative justice.
12 Claudio?
13 MR. GROSSMAN: When I (inaudible)
14 reason to smile at one, and the only thing I 15 think of is particularly in the other two 16 buildings where we had (inaudible) and 17 (inaudible) sit down, there was no place to sit 18 down because the office of Herman is full with 19 all kinds of strange, (inaudible), you know and 20 they (inaudible). And you see he is planning for 21 the (inaudible) center and I said that we are 22 (inaudible) of us. And then I got intent to 178

1 define Herman.
2 But when I think of Herman I think of 3 that office. That I think is a way, I mean with 4 the (inaudible) of action which is Herman on the 5 computer and we did (inaudible) create ideas and 6 promote institution and so forth.
7 It's a very warm place I would say and 8 difficult to find a seat on occasion.
9 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: I forgot to 10 ask, Macarena, do you want me to allow some time 11 for questions?
12 Sorry, Macarena? I'm sorry. Do you
13 want me to allow some time for questions? I 14 forgot to ask you before the panel.
15 PROFESSOR SAEZ: Oh, absolutely.
16 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: Okay.
17 PROFESSOR SAEZ: You're the
18 (inaudible).
19 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: Okay. Let me
20 ask you one more round of questions of our two 21 speakers, and then open it up for the remaining 22 five minutes.

179

1 I'm obviously happy for the opportunity
2 for us to recognize that Herman is not just an 3 extraordinarily visionary and effective human 4 rights and civil rights lawyer. But also a very 5 cherished human being. And so your stories have 6 helped to bring out that dimension.
7 But I want to kind of come back to his 8 role in the work that both of you have done. One 9 of the things that the three of us have in common 10 or that's sort of the uniting institution of the 11 Open Society of Justice Initiative which Aryeh 12 created and Claudio is now on the board of. And 13 Herman and I were on the original board members
14 of that. I wonder if you could talk about why 15 you turned to Herman when you were thinking about 16 creating this new institution?
17 MR. NEIER: Well, most of the scholar 18 activists who I knew were either involved in 19 international human rights, or they were involved 20 in domestic civil liberties. There were 21 relatively few who I can think of, and Herman was 22 foremost among them who were deeply involved both

180

1 domestically and internationally.
2 And I wanted the Open Society Justice
3 Initiative to play a role in litigation 4 internationally. But the lawyers who had 5 experience of the litigation in the United States 6 were actually more involved in litigation than 7 many of those who were focused on international 8 human rights.
9 And so because Herman combined both the 10 involvement in international human rights and the 11 involvement in domestic civil liberties and had 12 undertaken so much litigation, it seemed to me
13 that he would to play an immensely important role 14 in the Open Society Justice Initiative in helping 15 it to fulfill the role that I had in mind for it.
16 And, in fact, it has become a leading 17 body in international human rights litigation.
18 And I think Herman contributed a great deal to 19 making that take place.
20 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: Thank you.
21 Claudio?
22 MR. GROSSMAN: Well, Diane, you can

1 imagine that I have been a Dean of a law school
2 for 31 years. Let me say in that time, you have 3 crisis this and situations of tension and so 4 forth. As a matter of fact, when I went wants to 5 Columbia (inaudible) Commission there was a --
6 and we talked with the President of Columbia.
7 And I said we arrived, there have been 8 some massacres. And somebody in our group said, 9 well, told the person don't you have nightmare, 10 with all the situation in your country? And the 11 person said, well, no. Actually, I sleep very 12 well. My nightmare starts when I open my eyes.
13 Now, but with all the nightmares of 14 Columbia, I thought that Columbia was easier than 15 a law school from the point of your political 16 things here. Because you have the narco 17 trafficants, you have the army, you have the 18 capital of political parties, the church, some 19 international actor, and you could come to the 20 conclusion that you could not do anything.
21 In a law school you have a lot of 22 independent actors. And then you have 182

1 billionaire city, and (inaudible) and grantings
2 and a lot of things. And I -- when I had the 3 problem I will go and talk to Herman. And always 4 Herman, I mean it made me think about others.
5 And it entered my imagination and this space of 6 kind, like I said. Even if there were 7 difficulties sometimes to find a suitable chair, 8 I will tell you I have -- I think with tremendous 9 affection and gratitude to those moments where we 10 could talk. See these matters in (inaudible).
11 Appointments --
12 I will tell you, when I became the 13 Dean, on a Monday, you know, I trusted. I
14 received the letter of appointment that I 15 received on a Monday, it was (inaudible) and the 16 letter of appointment said you will not appoint a 17 Dean for finance. The second thing, you will not 18 appoint a (inaudible) in any administration
19 position (inaudible). You have run -- it was a 20 formality, I have run for the presidency of the 21 union.
22 So I never have discussed those matters

183

1 with anyone. I mean that was not part of my 2 conversation with the presidential (inaudible).
3 So I went to Herman. And I what do we do? I say 4 they're trying to -- what you can't do and what 5 do you think you can do. Well, I ended that 6 talking with the (inaudible) and we never talked 7 to that. And I'm not going to exclude anyone 8 from any position and I don't think it's good for 9 you and this is not. So he said okay, I'll 10 change this, and you'll get the letter and he 11 deleted the topic of (inaudible).
12 But he kept the appointment of the, let 13 me say that the appointment of the Dean for the 14 finance will be his. And I had told him, you 15 know they report to you. If I don't do a good 16 job you can -- I am responsible, but in the law
17 school everyone reports to the dean of the law 18 school.
19 And you could not give away the control
20 of that for anyone. But he would -- (inaudible) 21 the notion of the law school is not a separate 22 from the university. You work over it and again,

184

1 I will go and ask Herman what do you think about 2 this mess? I ended up calling the president. He 3 was not there and I told the dean, the provost if 4 I don't get the letter by 3:30 I have faculty 5 meeting and (inaudible). He said, well, the 6 president will call you. I say do you have a 7 problem then?
8 I got the letter at 3:30. The converse
9 saying that was not there. And I can only tell 10 you had it not been by conversation (inaudible)
11 that I have with Herman I would have reacted in a 12 different way, perhaps not giving a chance 13 (inaudible). And that's simply from the faculty
14 (inaudible).
15 So I think that -- and that was not the 16 only person at issue. It established a 17 relationship an institutional relationship that 18 allowed for many things in the law school. So I
19 think that Herman played a very important role.
20 I have not known a person who is quicker on his 21 feet and can provide you with advice. And is not 22 something -- I mean when you are dealing with

1 complex situations it's not -- nothing is easy.
2 So you have to battle different things and those 3 exchanges were very important for me. And I
4 think for the institution.

5 PROFESSOR ORENTLICHER: Thank you. I
6 think we're just about out of time. And I know 7 that my colleagues will thank me if I bring this 8 to a close on time. So I just want to close with 9 seconding a point that Jabareen made earlier this 10 morning, which is that while we are all happy for 11 this opportunity to express our appreciation for 12 our just extraordinary colleague, and cherished 13 colleague, we're not letting you go anywhere.

14 And this is not a -- it's just a 15 moment to thank you and to say we look forward to 16 being your colleague for many, many more years.
17 And thank you, Herman, for all that you've done 18 and all that you are.

19

20 PROFESSOR SAEZ: We will start our next 21 panel in (inaudible) so --

22 MR. LAGUARDA: Okay. Welcome back

1 be here and if you would just indulge me for one 2 moment.

3 I had heard about Herman for decades
4 while I was working in Washington but had never 5 really worked with him. Never had a lot of 6 contact until I came here to the law school. And 7 when I did we immediately fell into any number of 8 heated conversations. And one of the wonderful 9 things about Herman he is he does have this 10 amazing set of values, protection of civil 11 liberties, progressive social values, and I think 12 he and I agree on most of the end of goals that 13 aim for.

14 But we had no end of disputations
15 conversations about how to get there. And I just 16 want to say, they were so educational for me, 17 they were an important part of my day. We spoke 18 almost daily it seems. I would come in and see 19 it in his big chair. I don't know what else to 20 call it. It's not really a chair, it's almost a 21 throne. And we would go at it.

22 And we became good friends and co-

186

188

1 everyone. Please have a seat. Please take a
2 seat and we will begin with our next panel.

3 We'll get started in a moment. Thanks 4 very much. Thanks for returning for our 5 afternoon program.

6 I want to introduce the moderator of 7 our next panel, our former colleague in the 8 program on law and government, Bill Yeomans who 9 will be moderating our discussion in the next 10 panel.

11 And a reminder to everyone that we do
12 have a coffee break after this panel. So if you 13 haven't had your coffee you will still have an 14 opportunity. Thank you.

16 PERSPECTIVES ON VOTING RIGHTS
17 AND SOCIAL JUSTICE

18 MR. YEOMANS: Okay. Hello everybody.
19 It's great to be here. I am delighted to be part 20 of this amazing event for Herman. I have taken 21 to calling Herman Palooza, but I'm sure it has 22 other names as well. But it's a real pleasure to

1 authors and colleagues, and I will forever be 2 indebted to him for helping me grow as a teacher,
3 and as a person.

4 So thank you, Herman. Okay. So as a
5 young manager I was given a piece of advice by 6 wise old head said if you really want to succeed,
7 don't be afraid to surround yourself by people 8 who are smarter and better looking than you. And 9 I've really outdone myself today.

10 We have on this panel three of the 11 country's leading voting rights advocates and 12 civil rights and generally, but voting rights in 13 particular who are really on the front lines of 14 what's going on in the country today. And so I'm 15 really excited to have them here. And let me -- 16 I'm not going to spend a lot of time introducing 17 them because I could spend all of our time
18 doing -- well, just going through their awards.

19 But just so you know who they are.
20 Starting at the far end is Dale Ho. Dale is the 21 director of the ACLU's voting rights project
22 supervises the ACLU's of voting rights litigation

189

1 and advocacy work nationwide. He has that been 2 at the center of many of the recent most 3 important voting cases in the country, including 4 arguing in the Supreme Court in the recent census 5 citizenship question case.
6 He is involved in litigation around the 7 country. He is an adjunct at the NYU school of 8 Law. He is a frequent commentator and all forms 9 of media. And so we are delighted to have him.
10 Next to him is Allison Riggs. Allison 11 leads the voting rights fights program at the 12 Southern Coalition for Social Justice, which is 13 an organization in North Carolina. She has been 14 there for a decade, which is about as long as 15 there hasn't been a Southern Coalition for Social 16 Justice.
17 And she too has been in the forefront 18 of some of the most important cases of recent 19 years, including arguing a couple of cases in the 20 Supreme Court, a Texas redistricting case from 21 the term before this past one, and the North
22 Carolina gerrymandering case in this past term.

190

1 And I said to her before we came out here, the 2 results certainly didn't reflect the quality of 3 her argument.
4 MS. RIGGS: We lost.
5 MR. YEOMANS: I assumed people would 6 know that. She did a great job.
7 And then next to me is Jon Greenbaum.
8 Jon, I have to look on my phone to get your title
9 because I --
10 MR. GREENBAUM: Chief counsel.
11 MR. YEOMANS: Chief counsel for the 12 lawyers committee for civil rights. And Jon is a 13 long time civil rights litigator advocate. We 14 first knew each other back in the Department of 15 Justice. Jon was in the voting section, was a 16 key member of that section for a number of years.
17 And has since moved on to different pastures 18 with similar subject matter. And he too has been 19 involved in many of the most recent bits of 20 litigation -- most important bits of recent 21 litigation. So we are delighted to have him here 22 as well.

191

1 You notice, he is not Kristin Clark.
2 Kristen, unfortunately, had to make an emergency 3 appearance at a board meeting apparently. So she 4 could join us.
5 So what we're going to do, were going
6 to try to cover a fair number of voting issues
7 starting with a discussion of sort of the post
8 Shelby County landscape and the kinds of vote 9 suppression tactics that have arisen in the wake 10 of that decision. We are also going to move on 11 to talk about some current and upcoming issues.
12 Particularly, we will talk about the senses, and 13 were going to talk about redistricting.
14 So without further ado, let me just 15 give a little bit of background to make sure 16 everybody is on the same page. The Voting Rights
17 Act passed in 1965. An incredibly important 18 piece of legislation, really changed the voting 19 landscape and franchised millions, and was held 20 constitutional by the Supreme Court in 1966.
21 It was renewed in 1970, 1975, 1982,
22 and 2006. And it has, for our purposes to really

192

1 essential fixtures. One is Section 2, and one is 2 Section 5. Section 2 is an authorization for 3 private and government entities to sue to redress
4 election practices that result in discrimination
5 based on race.
6 A Section 5 is the preclearance
7 provision. And the preclearance provision 8 required that cover jurisdiction submit all of 9 their proposed election changes to the Department
10 of Justice or get clearance from a three-judge 11 court in the District of Columbia before they 12 could go into effect.
13 And what the jurisdiction had to show 14 was that the change would not have the purpose or 15 effect of discriminating on the basis of race.
16 This applied to, as I said, covert jurisdictions.
17 It was a coverage formula in Section 4 of the 18 act which was created in 1965 and depended on 19 registration, and turnout in presidential 20 elections, and whether or not a jurisdiction had 21 used a test or device in the past that was 22 discriminatory.

193

1 So most of the South, and a number of 2 other places in the country were covered
3 jurisdictions. They had to submit everything 4 they were going to do to the Department of 5 Justice, so the Department of Justice knew about 6 all of that and advocates knew about all of what 7 was happening. The Department of the Justice
8 could object, and, it was not completely 9 effective, but a pretty effective approach to 10 enforcing voting rights.

11 The Supreme Court in 2013 in Shelby
12 County decided that the Chief Justice decided 13 that times have changed, the five justices 14 decided, times have changed, the Act, the 15 preclearance requirement was no longer justified.
16 The coverage formula was outdated, it was based 17 on old data. The country had moved beyond that, 18 and coverage formula now violated something 19 called equal sovereignty of the states, which 20 many of us thought we had moved past in the Civil 21 War. But it was brought back.

22 So coverage states were unleashed, and

194

1 immediately took advantage. So the day that
2 Shelby County was decided the Texas attorney
3 general announced that the photo ID law that had 4 been on hold in taxes would go into effect. And 5 the North Carolina legislature, as we'll hear, in 6 acted a sort of greatest hits of vote suppression
7 law that had a devastating impact in North
8 Carolina. Other previously covered jurisdictions
9 followed suit.

10 So it has been the job of these people
11 to try to tamp down as many of these vote 12 suppression efforts as possible. And they've had 13 to do it through advocacy and through litigation.
14 In the problem, of course, with litigation in 15 the voting area is that you cannot undo
16 elections. Once an election change is use, once 17 the election happens, voters have lost their 18 opportunity to vote meaningfully and people have 19 been elected who should not have been. So a 20 heavy task, but they have done an extraordinary 21 job.

22 So I wanted to start with Jon Greenbaum

195

1 and ask him for a little bit of sort of the lay
2 of the landscape of the post Shelby world.
3 What's going on?

4 MR. GREENBAUM: Thanks, Bill. It's a
5 pleasure to be here. Professor Schwartz, I look 6 forward to reading the homework that you have 7 given us. Discussing your work, Bill, in terms 8 of discussing us, I wish I could have given his 9 bio because it's quite distinguished as well.
10 When I was a trial attorney at the civil rights
11 division, Bill was the deputy assistant attorney 12 general, and then, for a while, the us acting 13 assistant attorney general.

14 So as Bill mentioned, the Shelby County
15 case was a watershed moment in terms of voting 16 rights issues in this country, and the biggest 17 setback that we had in decades. Bill gave two 18 examples of how in the first month after the 19 Shelby County decision states that were governed
20 by Section 5 proved that times had not changed.
21 Texas, the day the decision came down 22 and said that it was going to start implementing

196

1 its of voting rights voter ID law. A law that 2 had been blocked by Section 5, both by the 3 Department of Justice and later by a federal 4 court because it was discriminatory. And we 5 spent the next 3-1/2 years litigating over that 6 issue, where we won in front of a -- we won first 7 of all in front of the trial court in federal 8 district court in Texas.

9 We won before a Fifth Circuit panel,
10 and then we won before the Fifth Circuit en banc, 11 but during all that time, during all those 12 elections between the summer of 2013 and the fall 13 of 2016 that law was in effect.

14 And then similarly, there was the North 15 Carolina voter suppression law where Allison will 16 probably talk about it some more, but in basic 17 terms what North Carolina did was to determine 18 which voting changes could they make that would 19 have a discriminatory effect, and they made those 20 changes. And if they determined that a voting 21 change wouldn't have a discriminatory effect, 22 they didn't make the change.

199

1 And that also was litigated basically
2 all the way up through the end of the Obama
3 Administration. So again, another 3-1/2 years 4 where during most of that time that law was in 5 effect.

6 And we've seen problems and a lot of 7 other places, some of which don't get attention 8 like those. I mean we got involved at the 9 lawyers committee in cases involving Hancock
10 County in Georgia. A small rural county, a 11 majority black county. But, a place where the 12 demographics are changing because it's now a 13 place where people are now building their lake 14 houses.

15 They were having a mayoral election in 16 the big city in Hancock County known as Sparta, a 17 majority black city. And the election commission 18 decided they would do a voter purge. And they 19 focused, and all but two of the voters that they 20 purged were African-American. And, in the 21 upcoming mayoral election white candidate won,
22 mayor for the first time in decades.

1 So we sued, and we won and they 2 admitted that they had violated the national 3 voter registration act. But, in the meantime, as 4 Bill said, you have elections, and in this case,
5 that white mayoral candidate won. And we've seen 6 a whole bunch of other examples of that. In 7 fact, I was adding this up for testimony I gave 8 for Congress a couple of weeks ago.

9 My organization of lawyers committee
10 has filed 41 voting cases since the Shelby County
11 decision. Four against the federal government 12 because now there are times in which you need to 13 sue them. Of the other 27, 29 were in the states 14 that used to be covered by Section 5. Even 15 though those states -- even though, you know, 16 there were only nine fully covered states under 17 Section 5, and only two partially covered states, 18 so that's an idea of where the discrimination is 19 still concentrated.

20 And then, just to let you know in terms 21 of the success rate, we've gotten a result, or 22 settlement, and 33 of the cases and we won 27 of

1 them. But, even with our organizations and 2 groups like ours, it's simply not enough. We 3 don't know a lot of times when discriminatory 4 voting changes might be made in some small town
5 or some small county in the South.

6 Because a lot of these things happen
7 under the radar and voters don't realize, okay,
8 my polling place has been moved from a community
9 center to the sheriff's office until they show up 10 at the polls that day. And that actually 11 happened in one of the matters in Georgia that we 12 were successful with our grassroots partners in 13 stopping this, that they wanted to move the 14 polling place to the police department.

15 So you know these are the issues that 16 were continuing to deal with, and it's going to 17 be exacerbated when we get to redistricting.
18 Because redistricting is the time in which not 19 only do we have to deal with the fact that 20 thousands, tens of thousands of jurisdictions are 21 going to be redistricting for the first time 22 since Shelby County, but they make a lot of 200

1 voting changes related to the redistricting.
2 Like polling place changes, precinct changes, and 3 other rules.

4 And so, you know, we have a big gap and 5 that we are dealing with and that we are going to 6 be dealing with in a more robust way in the years 7 to come.

8 How am I doing on time?

9 MR. YEOMANS: That's great.

10 MR. GREENBAUM: Turn it over?

11 MR. YEOMANS: Yeah, let's go down to 12 Dale.

13 Dale, you've been litigating lots of 14 these cases. Tell us a little bit about what 15 you've been up to.

16 MR. HO: Sure. Just before I do that I
17 just want to thank you for the introduction, 18 Bill. It's a real honor to be here today and get 19 a chance to talk to you all. It's a real 20 privilege to be here at an event for Herman.
21 He's a real legend at the ACLU where I work 22 directing the voting rights project there.

201

1 I just want to give a little bit of an 2 overview of the voting rights work that we've 3 been doing since Shelby County, which I think 4 will bring home what impact that decision had.
5 The devastating impact it had on voting rights.

6 A decision to release in those states
7 and counties with the worst histories of 8 discrimination from federal supervision really 9 couldn't have come at a worse time. In the run-10 up to the 2012 presidential election, 19 states 11 passed 25 laws that make it harder either to 12 register to vote, or to cast a ballot. And that 13 came kind of like a bolt of lightning for us.

14 At least I can say I was not expecting 15 that to happen in the run-up to the 2012
16 presidential election. Voting becoming easier
17 pretty much across the country. And then, I 18 guess something happened with the 2008 election, 19 I'm not sure what that might have been that made 20 a number of states decide too much voting rights 21 we're going to make voting harder.

22 A number of those voting restrictions

202

1 were stopped because of the Section 5
2 preclearance regimen. Early voting cutbacks in 3 Florida for example. Texas is voter ID law in 4 which Jon mentioned. A voter ID law in South
5 Carolina was loosened up so that voters without 6 ID could actually still vote under that law.

7 But when the Supreme Court struck down
8 the federal preclearance regime, or at least 9 immobilized it with the Shelby County decision, 10 despite what Chief Justice Roberts said about 11 things having changed in the South, Justice
12 Ginsburg warned that getting rid of preclearance 13 system was like throwing away your umbrella in a 14 rainstorm because you're not getting wet.

15 And sure enough, the downpour came.
16 We've been litigating -- we've been up to our 17 eyeballs I would say in litigation over the past 18 six years or so. And I think the patterns we've 19 seen in that litigation reveal three points.

20 The first is that, again,
21 notwithstanding Chief Justice Roberts
22 characterization of things in the South, the

1 problems we see in voting rights appear to remain 2 concentrated in exactly those parts of the 3 country that Section 5 was protecting.

4 There have been a total of 26
5 successful cases brought under Section 2 of the 6 Voting Rights Act that are available on Westlaw.
7 There are more cases than that, but these are 8 cases where there has either been a judicial 9 decision or a settlement in a case alleging 10 racial discrimination under the VRA.

11 That doesn't include all the voting
12 rights cases over the last six years, not cases 13 under the National Voter Registration Act, or 14 under the Constitution, or under other provisions
15 of the Voting Rights Act, like the language
16 assistance provisions. But 26 cases successful 17 under Section 2 of the VRA since Shelby County.

18 More than half of those cases were in 19 the dozen or so cases that were covered by 20 Section 5 until the Shelby County decision. So 21 we see that those handful of states continue to 22 have sort of an outsize number of voting rights

204

1 of violations.

2 The second thing I noticed when I
3 looked at these cases is that more than half of 4 them occurred at the local level instead of the 5 state level. Now, when a state changes its laws 6 to in act a new voter ID law, or a new 7 restriction on registration, or cutbacks in early 8 voting, that's typically something that gets 9 covered in the local paper. It's a bill that 10 gets passed in a state legislature, and folks 11 like us at the ACLU hear about it, we can try to 12 litigate that.

13 But when changes to voting practices
14 happen at the local level it's much harder for us
15 to hear about it. And that, I think, underscores 16 another thing that we lost with the demise of the 17 preclearance regime, which was the simple 18 obligation for states and localities that were 19 covered by it to provide notice. To let the 20 Department of Justice know about it. The 21 Department of Justice would publish that 22 information and that would allow folks like us to 205

1 know about what was happening at the local level.
2 And now we're sort of left playing detective, or 3 playing catch-up most of the time.
4 And there is a third point, I think,
5 that emerges when you look at these cases, and 6 I'll just talk about the ACLU's experience.
7 We've litigated 10 successful Section 2 Voting
8 Rights Act cases since Shelby County. Again, 9 that's not all our voting rights cases because 10 some of them are brought under other statutes.
11 But if you look at the cases we've 12 litigated, the average length of time is about 13 two years to litigate those cases. That's even 14 when we're seeking an expedited schedule. You 15 know, it's funny when I go and talk to law
16 students I tell them voting rights cases are so 17 much faster than other kinds of civil litigation.
18 We are sometime finished in two years. And the 19 students are sort of like, wow.
20 What I think that gets home is what 21 Bill was mentioning about the fact that voting 22 cases are different from other kinds of 206

1 discrimination cases. If you suffer from, say,
2 employment discrimination you don't get, say, a
3 raise that you were entitled to. You can bring a 4 case, and after the fact, if you prevail, you can 5 in theory, anyway, be made whole after the fact.
6 You can get your back pay, you can get it with 7 interest.
8 But if an election happens under a 9 discriminatory voting regime, there is no way to 10 undo that election and make the victims of 11 discrimination whole. Just in those 10 12 successful cases that we brought, between the 13 time that we filed suit in the time that we got a 14 favorable result for our clients, just in those 15 10 cases 350 federal, state, and local officials 16 were elected in those places under regimes that 17 were later determined to be discriminatory.
18 The best example I can think of is 19 other than the North Carolina case that Allison 20 led and is going to talk about, is a case that we 21 brought in Ferguson, challenging the way that the 22 school board is elected there. I think everyone

207

1 is familiar with Ferguson, in some ways the 2 birthplace of the Black Lives Matter movement
3 after Michael Brown was shot.
4 The school district there was created 5 pursuant to a 1975 desegregation order. As 6 recently as 2014 the school district had zero
7 African-American board members despite the fact 8 that the student body of the school district was 9 80 percent African-American. We brought a 10 lawsuit challenging the method of election there 11 to try to make it so that it could provide black 12 voters in Ferguson an opportunity to elect 13 members of their own community.
14 The case took four years to litigate 15 from start to when we got a favorable ruling from 16 the Eighth Circuit on appeal. And in that time, 17 the entire school board turned over 1-1/3 times
18 before we could finally get relief implemented
19 which went into effect earlier this year.
20 So the third point I think that I'm 21 trying to make was that we really lost something 22 with preclearance. We lost the ability to stop

208

1 voting discrimination before it happens and that 2 really results in irreparable harm for voters.
3 MR. YEOMANS: Thank you, Dale.
4 Allison, North Carolina.
5 MS. RIGGS: So in the run up to the 6 Shelby County decision, a lot of the civil rights 7 community was warning what would happen if we 8 lost Section 5, and we were frequently dismissed
9 as worrywarts, and exaggerators. And North 10 Carolina created a scenario where I never got 11 less pressure from saying I told you so.
12 Just as a little background, North
13 Carolina in the spring of 2013, before the Shelby
14 County decision came down, the House in the North 15 Carolina General assembly passed a voter ID law.
16 This was when Section 5 was in place and they 17 knew they would have to go through preclearance.
18 It was a problematic law, but it was -- it had 19 some give.
20 So then it got sent to the Senate and 21 it just sat there for months. The Senate didn't 22 do anything. In June, when the Shelby County

209
1 decision was announced, one of the head senators
2 of the North Carolina Senate said great, no more
3 preclearance. Now we can go with the full bill, 4 referring to the voter ID bill.
5 And we were, well, what's the full 6 bill? You just passed a voter ID bill out of the 7 House. They come back a short time later and 8 changed what had been a 17 page a voter ID bill 9 into a 58 page omnibus election bill that not 10 only rolled back every election reform designed 11 to increase participation, but took the ID law
12 that had passed out of the House and stripped out 13 IDs that had been acceptable in the House, and 14 made it a more stringent voter ID law.
15 And just so you understand, elect oral 16 change in North Carolina had happened really 17 quickly and really dramatically in the previous 18 10, 15 years. We got early voting in the late 19 1990s. In the mid-'90s, early '90s North 20 Carolina participation rates were abysmal. We 21 were in the 40s, the gap between black and white 22 participation was enormous.

210
1 And so from '99 to 2011 we started
2 implementing these reforms, having early
3 voting's, no excuse absentee voting, same-day 4 registration during early voting. Out of 5 precinct voting, so if you couldn't get to your 6 assigned precinct on election day you could still 7 vote.
8 Preregistration for 16 and 17-year-
9 olds. And that led us to the situation where in 10 2008 and 2012 we finally saw something
11 approaching parity between black and white
12 participation. And North Carolina's 13 participation rate overall was incredibly high.
14 It's a youth participation rate was off the 15 charts. And President Obama won North Carolina 16 in 2008.
17 So that is what led to rolling back
18 every single one of those reforms that I just 19 listed, proof. Then an ID law that was a good 20 enough in the House, suddenly student IDs aren't 21 good anymore. Public assistance IDs aren't good 22 anymore.

211
1 And so we litigated the case and I was 2 lucky to co-counsel with Dale. The Department of 3 Justice was involved in this case, and it took 4 forever. We brought claims under Section 2,
5 under the Constitution, under the 26th amendment,
6 and it took a long time. We had some elections 7 under these really problematic provisions and we 8 saw voters being disenfranchised left and right.
9 And even though we ultimately won, we 10 secured one of what is to me, and unbiased, the 11 most inspiring opinions out of Fourth Circuit
12 finding that this lot was intentionally racially 13 discriminatory. That the legislature knew what 14 it was doing and designed this law with surgical 15 precision to undermine the ability of black 16 voters to participate in the political process.
17 Despite that huge win, and keeping it
18 out of the Supreme Court, despite that North 19 Carolina -- it's not like they said okay. I did 20 wrong. I do better from here out. The message 21 they took was what we did wrong was lumping it 22 all together. If we just did all of this stuff

212
1 piecemeal we would be fine. And that's what 2 we're facing now.
3 They found another way to get ID back
4 in the mix. They found new and creative ways to 5 attack and undermine early voting, and so it
6 becomes a game of whack-a-mole. These laws go 7 into effect immediately. We have to seek 8 preliminary injunctions which, you know, are 9 difficult to gather that kind of evidence really 10 quickly, and to stop the laws from going into 11 effect.
12 And so it's a real injury to voters of 13 color in our state and across the South because 14 there is just only so many of us, and there are 15 only so many resources to do this work. The 16 Department of Justice's preclearance ability was 17 really important. And just to sort of let you 18 know how devious this is, I mean these 19 legislators are acting -- they can put a positive 20 spin on anything. And without the Department of 21 Justice doing a really careful analysis based on 22 data this stuff goes through and seems okay.

1 A recent example is, last year North
2 Carolina's legislature enacted a bill that they 3 called the uniform early voting hours
4 requirement. That sounds okay. They said we 5 want every county to have all of its sites open 6 the exact same time, from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m.
7 We have 100 counties in North Carolina. Not 8 every county wants to be operating early voting 9 sites at 7:00 a.m. They could have evidence that 10 that no one will vote at 7:00 a.m., but they were 11 being forced by the state to do that.

12 So what did we find happened? In order
13 to staff at these hours that didn't make sense, 14 in order to comply with this rule that if one 15 site is open every site is going to open, we 16 solve formally covered counties reducing their 17 number of early voting sites from 5 to 3. From 4 18 to 2, and across the state a loss in the number 19 of early voting sites.

20 And the legislature said well, we had 21 more hours of early voting than we ever had. I'm 22 like yes, during the hours that no one was using

214

1 them. We have very rural counties. Keeping a 2 site open in a rural part of the county, the 3 county board of elections might have decided that 4 if it makes sense to open a site in a rural area
5 on the weekends when people use it.

6 But now, they had to keep all sites
7 open all the time. They have limited resources.
8 It's not like that this mandate for uniformity 9 came with a check. So sites closed left and 10 right and a real disservice to voters, especially 11 in a state where public transportation is 12 lacking, shall we say.

13 So this is what we fight every day, and 14 it's not stopping. It's a getting more and more 15 creative just like what we saw when Section 5 was 16 put into place in the first place. That the 17 discriminators were coming up with new ways to 18 get around the laws. And in fact, very little 19 has changed since 1965 on that front.

20 MR. YEOMANS:.. Oh that's so sad.

21 So yeah. I so I think what the 22 panelists have made very clear is that the fact

1 that we have local elections and that we allow 2 local jurisdictions to administer elections opens
3 up nearly infinite possibilities for vote
4 suppression. And as Dale mentioned, one of the 5 things that was lost, and as I mentioned earlier, 6 with Section 5 and with preclearance was that in 7 the past when we had Section 5 all of those 8 changes had to be surfaced. They had to be 9 reported to Washington before they could go into 10 effect.

11 It is obviously, now, extremely 12 difficult as I've said to know what's going on, 13 to know when a local jurisdiction is making plot 14 may be a fairly minor change, or may appear, as 15 Allison says, to be a fairly neutral positive 16 change that will have a huge discriminatory
17 impact. It is extremely difficult to keep tabs 18 on these things, and it is because we have -- we 19 conduct thousands of elections every time we have 20 an election.

21 So, the future. We have a future
22 coming. And there are two events coming that are

216

1 hugely significant for voting and are certainly 2 related. And the first is the census. We are 3 coming up on the 2020 census and the second is 4 the event that traditionally follows the census,
5 which is redistricting throughout the country.
6 And this will be the first time that we are 7 dealing with redistricting without Section 5, 8 which will pose enormous new challenges.

9 But before we get to redistricting, we 10 have to get through the census. And there have 11 been some recent issues concerning the census
12 that have been unusually significant. And I
13 wanted to ask both Jon, and Dale, to talk a 14 little bit about the importance of the census to 15 voting rights and what's it going on this 16 upcoming census.

17 Jon, you want to start?

18 MR. GREENBAUM: Yes, I'll start and 19 then turn it over to Dale at some point in the 20 conversation. So why does the census matter?
21 Well, census matters because the census is what 22 we used to count people. And why discounting

217

1 people matter in terms of redistricting? Well, 2 it's because one person, one vote.
3 And so basically every 10 years,
4 because in most places you have population 5 changes every 10 years anyplace that has 6 districts, whether we're talking about 7 congressional seats, or state legislative seats 8 or school board seats, or city council seats, or 9 water district seats. Anyplace that has 10 districts has to redistrict, and uses the census 11 data as the basis for having equal numbers of 12 people in each district.
13 A couple of big issues that are out 14 there that are interrelated. The first was the 15 subject of litigation that both Dale and I were 16 involved in related to the Commerce Secretary's 17 decision to put a citizenship question on the 18 2020 census. And the Commerce Secretary was 19 essentially hell-bent to do this. He had early 20 talks with people like Steve Bannon and Kris 21 Kobach putting a question on.
22 Later on we found out about some 218

1 additional documents and that were out there that 2 were used. But he needed to get another federal 3 agency to say that there is a good reason for 4 putting a citizenship question on the census.
5 And he went to the Department of Homeland
6 Security and they said we can't find one.
7 The first time he went to the 8 Department of Justice and they said we can't find 9 one. But later, after a conversation between 10 Commerce Secretary Ross and Attorney General
11 Sessions, Sessions said we will give you what you 12 want.
13 What they came up with was a concocted 14 reason saying that citizenship dates is needed by 15 the Department of Justice in order to enforce 16 Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act; something 17 that the Department of Justice had never needed
18 before and something that was particularly ironic 19 given that the Department of Justice during the 20 Trump Administration wasn't bringing Section 2 21 cases. In fact, it's only brought one in its 22 three years.

219

1 So they came back and, like I said, the 2 Department of Justice said okay, we need
3 citizenship data for the census. But that didn't 4 necessarily mean you had to have a citizenship 5 question. And so the employees within -- from 6 the Census Bureau who work on the census
7 basically came up with a memo talking about all 8 the various options for what's going to give you 9 the most accurate citizenship data on a census.
10 And they said the most accurate way to 11 do it is actually to use administrative records, 12 over putting a question on the census itself.
13 And it gave the reasons why. So then, Secretary 14 Ross basically said that's not good enough. What 15 if we used a combination of asking the question 16 and putting the data -- asking the question using 17 administrative records?
18 And the Bureau came back a second time 19 and said no. Using the data itself is going to 20 be more accurate. You're going to get more 21 accurate data, you are going to get more 22 information, and more accurate information. And 220

1 a large part of the reason why is that if you put 2 a citizenship question on the form, a lot of 3 people will answer the form. And particularly 4 people that are most vulnerable residents will 5 not answer the form.
6 Which, of course, is a large reason why 7 the political people wanted the question to be on 8 in the first place so that certain people would 9 not answer the form. And that would, ultimately, 10 help -- and we later found out from a Republican 11 strategist that Republicans saw this as a way of 12 improving their chances of winning elections.
13 And so there were three cases that were 14 filed when the Commerce Secretary made his 15 decision there were three cases that were filed 16 with respect to this. The California case, first 17 filed in the state of California. My 18 organization of lawyers committee represented the 19 City of San Jose and Baja in that case.
20 The case that was filed in New York by 21 New York and several other states that Dale and 22 the ACLU and other organizations were brought in.

1 And then a third case that was filed in Maryland 2 that involved several private plaintiffs in that 3 case.
4 Before I turn it over to Dale, I would 5 just say that as a civil rights litigator for the 6 last 25 years, I've been involved in a lot of 7 crazy cases. This one was by far, the craziest
8 one that I was involved in. And, you know, I go 9 back to those eight days between when -- after we 10 thought we had won the case in front of the 11 Supreme Court and President Trump had tweeted and 12 said it's not over.
13 In those eight days between that tweet
14 and then when they finally conceded were 15 extremely stressful. I mean I thought that we 16 were headed for a constitutional crisis because 17 the Constitution gives Congress -- delegates to 18 Congress the authority to conduct the census.
19 And essentially what the President was doing was 20 taking over that authority. And I was concerned 21 that a majority of the Supreme Court was going to 22 let him do it. But luckily it never came to 222

1 that. We got a big victory.
2 And I'll turn it over to Dale to talk
3 about the rest of it.
4 MR. HO: Thanks a lot, Jon. So just to 5 give people a sense of the stakes of this case.
6 The Administration's own estimate as of this 7 summer, not ours, don't take my word for it. The 8 Census Bureau's own estimate this summer was that 9 if a citizenship question were on the decennial 10 census questionnaire 9 million people would not 11 respond to the census.
12 Now, because the census is the basis
13 for divvying up representing in the House of 14 Representatives, allocating seats internally
15 within states during the redistricting process
16 and also serves the basis for distributing $900 17 billion in federal funds annually, you can 18 imagine what the might mean if 9 million people 19 don't respond to the census who are concentrated 20 in particular places.
21 Just to give you a sense. I mean, if 22 you put 9 million people together that would be

223

1 our 11th largest state. It's more people than in 2 the state of New Jersey. That state would have 3 12 seats in Congress and 14 votes in the 4 electoral college. So we're not talking about 5 just you know, losing a few numbers here and 6 there.
7 The district court in our case, at a 8 time when the census bureau's estimate was 9 actually lower, in terms of the effect, found 10 that California, New York, Florida, Illinois,
11 Arizona, and Texas were all likely to lose a seat
12 in the House if there were a citizenship question
13 on the census. And then within those states 14 representation would get drained from urban 15 communities diverse areas of the states and would 16 flow to rural disproportionately white areas of 17 those states.
18 We have two basic arguments against the 19 Administration's attempt to put the question on.
20 One a sustentative one that basically the notion 21 that enforcing the Voting Rights Act could, in 22 some way, be facilitated by adding this question.

224

1 It was not supported by the evidence that was 2 before the Commerce Secretary at the time he made 3 his decision.
4 And then second, a series of procedural 5 arguments that the Secretary in making that 6 decision regardless of whether of its'
7 substantive validity didn't follow proper 8 procedures including that he didn't openly and 9 honestly disclose his real reason for adding a 10 citizenship question to the census.
11 We won in a 5/4 decision from the 12 Supreme Court as Jon alluded to. But I want to 13 say if you believe the CNN reports that Chief 14 Justice Roberts, after the oral argument
15 initially was ready to side with the government, 16 but at some point switched his vote; if that's 17 the case then, you know, I think I can say with 18 certainty that the result of the case did not 19 reflect my real advocacy either.
20 There was a lot of gloom and doom
21 actually after the argument. I actually thought 22 the argument had gone well. But if you went in 225

227

1 thinking that we were the underdog, and it's 2 certainly the case that nothing that happened 3 during that argument would have changed that 4 assessment.

5 Now, between the oral argument and when 6 the decision was issued our co-counsel in the 7 case who were litigating an unrelated partisan 8 gerrymandering case separate and apart from the 9 one that I think Allison is going to talk about 10 in the state court of North Carolina came across 11 some files from eight deceased Republican 12 gerrymandering guru. A man named Dr. Thomas 13 Hofeller. And in those files they found two 14 documents related to the citizenship question, 15 which was kind of bizarre.

16 One of the questions indicated that if 17 Republicans wanted to pursue a redistricting 18 strategy that excluded non-citizens entirely they 19 would need a citizenship question to do that.
20 And the good news from Dr. Hofeller's perspective 21 is that would produce a process that would be in 22 his words advantageous to Republicans and non-

1 document that spelled out in black and white what 2 we had believed all along, which was that the 3 Administration wasn't in fact interested,
4 surprise, the Trump Administration was not 5 interested in protecting minority voting rights.

6 But there, plainly in black and white they had a 7 goal of subverting minority voting right 8 protections and diluting the representation of 9 Hispanic communities.

10 We, you know, frankly didn't know what 11 to do with this. The record is closed, a lot of 12 people advised us, you know, the case has been 13 fully submitted to the Court, it's over. You 14 know take your lumps, which is what people
15 expected were coming, and maybe they were. Maybe 16 Chief Justice Roberts had already changed his 17 mind at that point.

18 But we decided not to go down without 19 swinging and did something, I think, pretty 20 unusual. We filed a motion for remand in the 21 Supreme Court based on the discovery of these new 22 documents and asked the Court to allow the 226

228

1 Hispanic whites, and disadvantageous to 2 Hispanics. That's the first document.

3 The second document in Dr. Hofeller's
4 files was a request purported from the Department 5 of Justice to add a citizenship question to the 6 census because it would facilitate enforcement of 7 the Voting Rights Act and protect minority voting
8 rights.

9 We looked at that letter and that 10 letter was contained, or the language in that 11 letter was contained verbatim in a first draft of 12 the Department of Justice's letter requesting the 13 question, which was hand delivered by the 14 Commerce Secretary's advisor census issues to the 15 acting assistant attorney general for civil 16 rights who had oversight of the voting section 17 and who ultimately drafted the Department of 18 Justice's official request for the citizenship 19 question.

20 So for the first time, and we didn't 21 discover this until after the oral argument in 22 the case. But for the first time we had a

1 District Court to, in the first instance, assess 2 what these documents actually meant.

3 But by doing that we were able to put 4 those documents squarely before the Supreme Court 5 so it wasn't just something out in the ether that 6 maybe the Justices were reading about. That they 7 didn't have any way of escaping what we all, at 8 that point thought we knew to be true.

9 We got the decision a couple of weeks 10 later and the decision -- not the decision nor 11 the concurrences, nor the dissents, make any 12 mention of the Hofeller files. So I think we'll 13 never know, or at least we won't know for a long 14 time whether or not they had any impact on the 15 decision.

16 But I think what they made clear is 17 that the efforts to suppress minority voting 18 rights that we were talking about in the first 19 half of this, those wave of laws that have made 20 it harder for people to register to vote or to 21 vote, that they're directly connected to other 22 kinds of efforts to weaken the power and 229

231

1 representation of minority communities.
2 MR. YEOMANS: Okay. Thank you. So 3 the next step after the census is complete is for 4 State legislatures to convene and start redrawing
5 legislative districts. North Carolina, again, 6 has been going through an interesting process
7 recently. But all states are going to be facing 8 a very interesting process this time around and 9 particularly in previously covered jurisdictions.
10 This will be the first time we've gone through 11 the decennial redistricting cycle without Section 12 5 in place. And it is going to be a different 13 environment.

14 So Allison, give us your thoughts.

15 MS. RIGGS: Yeah. I hate always being 16 the Debbie downer. It's hard, but I promise I'll 17 end with a positive call to action. I swear. So 18 redistricting doesn't just happen at the state 19 level. That's the sexy attention getting 20 redistricting. It happens everywhere and it 21 happens in a very compressed time schedule. Your 22 town councils, your school boards, many, many of 230

1 those jurisdictions that elect from districts
2 will have to redistrict. So it just happens in a
3 wave and it happened in 2011 to 2012. It's going 4 to happen in 2021 to 2022. We will be swamped.

5 And it wasn't easy with Section 5. We 6 engaged in a lot of redistricting and I've had a 7 number of cases that stretched on until this year
8 that we filed after the 2011 redistricting cycle 9 and it's been an uphill battle, particularly in 10 federal court. I think this last cycle has seen 11 more Supreme Court cases on redistricting than 12 we've seen in some time.

13 And the three buckets that they've 14 fallen into are Section 2 and constitutional 15 claims of intentional race discrimination, racial 16 gerrymandering cases and partisan gerrymandering 17 cases.

18 And really the only category that saw 19 any significant success was the racial 20 gerrymandering cases where state legislatures in 21 Alabama, and North Carolina, and Virginia had 22 purposely and cynically packed black voters into

1 as few districts as possible to limit their 2 political power.

3 But in doing so, used race in an 4 extreme way to separate black voters from white
5 voters. And that offended even the conservatives 6 on the court. And so we had some success that 7 there.

8 In Texas the -- I mean this is what is 9 discouraging about litigating Section 2 and 10 Constitution cases in this federal judiciary.
11 Texas experienced enormous population growth that 12 the 2010 census captured. So much so, that they 13 got four additional congressional districts. And 14 90 percent of that population growth was due to 15 growth of communities of color. The Anglo 16 population in most areas decreased, and in some 17 places it just barely increased.

18 Despite that, despite being the primary
19 driver of population growth in Texas, communities
20 of color not only solve no benefit from the 2011
21 redistricting cycle, they lost representation.
22 They didn't get any additional congressional 232

1 seats where they could elect their candidates of 2 choice. They lost one. And the same in state
3 legislative districts. And this was when we had 4 Section 5, so DOJ objected. A DC District Court
5 said yeah, this is bad.

6 But then we lost Section 5 and Texas
7 was back at it again. And so we continued
8 litigating this case again. And in 2017 a three-9 judge panel comprised of two Republican 10 appointees said yeah, this is intentional racial 11 discrimination. This is not okay.

12 There was just a variety -- and this 13 was a grab bag of violations. They had racial 14 gerrymandering violations, they had intentional
15 racial discrimination violations, Section 2
16 violations and we went up to the Supreme Court
17 and we won on all of those. And the only thing 18 that survived our visit to the Supreme Court was 19 the racial gerrymandering claim and one house
20 district. Everything else was reversed. So 21 that's the challenge we face in this atmosphere
22 and in this Court.

233

235

1 The good news is the Supreme Court
2 can't take up all of these cases. They didn't 3 like taking as many as they did. And local 4 redistricting doesn't need to go through a three-5 judge panel usually, so we can just try and avoid 6 the court granting cert.

7 But another thing we had hoped to see 8 some progress on in this decade was getting -- 9 the social science around partisan gerrymandering 10 has developed and become more precise in 11 assessing where the partisan harms in purposeful 12 manipulation of district lines to ensure that 13 some group, whether it's white folks are 14 Republicans or whoever stays in power.

15 And my group is a racial justice
16 organization and we have litigated partisan
17 gerrymandering cases because we think there is a 18 racial justice implication to them. Particularly 19 in the South, but throughout the country there is 20 alignment and intersection between race and 21 politics that we can't ignore. And we don't want 22 legislatures to be able to engage in intentional

1 be a challenge. And not having Section 5 is 2 going to be a real burden on communities of color
3 across the South because some of the stuff is not 4 going to be noticed and publicized the way it 5 used to be.

6 It used to be you could go on -- and 7 remember redistricting is happening in mass in a 8 wave, at every level of government. It used to 9 be you could go on DOJ's website and see data and 10 maps of the proposed redistricting plans being 11 submitted to DOJ for their review. So you could 12 see all the data you needed to see right up there 13 on the website.

14 Now, without that notification element
15 not only can groups like ours not easily assist 16 affected communities, but affected communities 17 don't have an ease of access to that kind of 18 information. They may go to a town council 19 meeting and see some maps, but they will have 20 that granular data that really tells you if there 21 is a problem or not. And they are going to have 22 to do a lot more advocacy.

234

236

1 racial discrimination and just call it partisan
2 discrimination.

3 And so we, again, won in the District
4 Court. Won unanimously with a Republican 5 appointee, and in a 5/4 decision the Supreme 6 Court said no, these cases aren't just judicial, 7 these are political questions. We are not going 8 to wait into that thicket. And so it was a 9 disappointment.

10 The Court had an opportunity to 11 indicate constitutional rights and really step 12 into the breach where the technology has become 13 so sophisticated they can almost draw a perfect 14 gerrymander. We used to call gerrymanders that 15 didn't work as intended dummy gerrymanders.
16 Well, the gerrymanders went to college now and we 17 don't see any of that anymore. They perform as 18 they are intended to perform.

19 So now we are stuck on partisan
20 gerrymandering claims in state courts and, you 21 know, state courts are even slower than federal 22 courts usually, unfortunately. So it's going to

1 And so we are really at a turning point 2 in how we do redistricting education and 3 outreach. We can't be everywhere. Folks on the 4 ground are really going to need to not only 5 understand redistricting and how to engage in the 6 legislative process, but engage in and open up 7 the process in a more democratic way.

8 Right now much of the software is very 9 expensive. The data is hard to obtain. And so 10 all of our groups are working on changing that in 11 conjunction with academics and technology
12 experts, opening up online redistricting software 13 platforms so people can play with maps and 14 analyze maps and see what the impact is.

15 But it's going to take a concerted 16 effort not only with the civil rights community
17 and grassroots organizations on the ground, but I 18 think folks from the private bar are really going 19 to be needed even more than we need them 20 normally, pulled in to help support all of these 21 communities that are now going to experience 22 redistricting in a different way than they have 237

239

1 before.
2 And this is doable. This is doable if 3 every single person in here makes a commitment to 4 themselves and to folks in formerly covered 5 jurisdictions to lend your expertise, to land 6 your talents, to lend your support, financial or 7 moral. However you can do it to the work that we 8 have to do because it's going to be challenging.

9 But we are creative and we are 10 relentless, and we are good at arcade games like 11 whack-a-mole. So I think there is a lot of 12 people really geared up for the fight and since 13 the urgency of what's about to happen in 2021.
14 And we look forward to hopefully bring more of 15 you in to help with this work.

16 MR. YEOMANS: Okay. Well, that was a 17 moderately positive note. It gives people some 18 hope. Just one, again, speaking about Section 5
19 technical point that we haven't really discussed 20 is that Section 5 did have an effect standard in 21 it. So it prohibited election changes that would 22 have the purpose or effect of discriminating.

238

1 And effect was defined by the Supreme Court as 2 meaning retro aggression. Basically minority 3 voters could be worse off after the change than 4 they were before the change.

5 Nothing like that standard will apply
6 going forward. Going forward, advocates will 7 have to show that there was intentional
8 discrimination or that Section 2 of the voting 9 right act which has a results standard which is 10 sort of an intense light standard, I say that 11 only in friendly company. Those standards are 12 much more difficult to satisfy than 13 retrogression. So we will be facing that as 14 well.

15 Just one other note, just going back to 16 the beginning of our conversation, after the 17 Shelby County decision a bunch of us, including 18 the lawyers committee, the ACLU, and others sat 19 down to try to put together legislation that 20 would restore preclearance that would come up 21 with a formula that could survive, that could 22 pass Congress and survive the scrutiny of the 1 Supreme Court.

2 It did and that legislation has been 3 pending for the last, at least five years now, 4 with no movement, not surprisingly in this 5 Congress.

6 AUDIENCE: I wouldn't say no movement.

7 MR. YEOMANS: Backward movement.

8 AUDIENCE: Movement in one house, not 9 in the other.

10 MR. YEOMANS: Okay. Well certainly 11 the House. The House has taken it up and there 12 is HR4 in the House.

13 But there is hope, I think, that if we 14 have a president of another party and a Congress 15 of another party that at some point we could 16 restore some of the sanity of Section 5 to these 17 jurisdictions, as Dale pointed out that tend to 18 be the same jurisdictions over and over. And I 19 guess Jon pointed that out too. Who again could 20 be covered by Section 5 and should be covered by 21 a preclearance requirement.

22 So there is that to look forward to.

240

1 Would love to get any of your
2 questions. We have just a few minutes left.
3 Yes.

4 AUDIENCE: Many years have now expired
5 since Shelby County and there is a list of 6 greater powers that takes you back to pre Voting
7 Rights Act. Is there any thought (inaudible)
8 that you have enough data now to structure a 9 lawsuit that could show the Supreme Court, if 10 they would look, that Roberts view that the Civil 11 War was over doesn't hold water?

12 Now, I don't think there are 13 (inaudible), but has any thought -- I mean if you 14 have categorized all these things that those of 15 us who are old enough to know about as 16 (inaudible) of the Voting Rights Section of the 17 Civil Rights Commission in 1963, my first job out 18 of law school, and whack-a-mole was even worse
19 then, as you know.

20 So now you've got almost nine years,
21 and as you said the moment that case came down, I 22 mean you couldn't buy a pair of sneakers quicker

241

243

1 than they ran those things. Is there any 2 possibility of amassing data based on well, it's 3 Roberts is saying it's all over. The folks down
4 South are really (inaudible), you know. Eat 5 those corn pones and stuff like that. They're 6 (inaudible), they love all the black folk. Is 7 that a crazy idea or is it --

8 PROFESSOR HELLERSTEIN: Yeah.

9 AUDIENCE: You think it's crazy?

10 MR. YEOMANS: I think what you're 11 describing is a great legislative record.

12 MR. GREENBAUM: Yeah.

13 MR. YEOMANS: And there was a great
14 legislative record in 2006, and I know that Jon 15 was very engaged in putting together the 16 nationwide record requiring the continuation of 17 preclearance and Congress held some 20 hearings, 18 compiled 15,000 pages of documents. I was on the 19 Senate Judiciary committee then when we passed 20 it, and it would have been very difficult to 21 compile a better record, or a more compelling 22 record.

242

1 That didn't matter to a majority of the 2 Supreme Court, and I think it would matter even 3 less to this majority of the supreme court, 4 unfortunately. And so the challenge would be 5 coming up with a new (inaudible) formula that 6 would survive scrutiny, putting it into a 7 lawsuit. I don't see the frame for that.

8 MR. GREENBAUM: Yeah, I don't see the 9 frame either and Bill, I -- we're sort of on the 10 defensive here in terms of what the Supreme Court 11 did in Shelby was kicked it back to Congress to 12 come up with a new formula. And so the question 13 has got to be there's got to be more Congress as 14 opposed to a new lawsuit. Now, of course if 15 Congress passes something then we'll be involved 16 in defending against the constitutional challenge 17 that will follow.

18 AUDIENCE: I have a question about this 19 goal of (inaudible) citizenship. It's not a new 20 idea, but it is one that is gaining a log or 21 currency. And what -- so could you talk about 22 just what are the strongest arguments against

1 that and is that something that will come up
2 simply because there is some state that is going 3 to say that's how were going to do it and they're 4 going to force the issue that way? In your 5 crystal ball, what do you see?

6 MR. GREENBAUM: So it's interesting
7 because the one person one vote doctrine has 8 never meant what it says, right. Your one 9 person, one vote that makes it sound like every 10 district should have the same number of voters.
11 But that's not actually the rule that emerged
12 from Reynolds v. Sims, the Supreme Court case 13 that established that.

14 What the case instead required is that 15 every district have the same number of people, 16 right. So that legislators each represented the 17 same number of people all of us, voters and 18 nonvoters are represented equally in the 19 political process.

20 Now, all that being said, one person
21 one vote, has such a powerful kind of sway
22 rhetorically that some people have tried to push

244

1 in that argument to say let's not have citizens
2 count -- let's not have non-citizens count at all
3 in the redistricting process because noncitizens
4 can't vote. We need only citizens to be counted.
5 Now that kind of ignores the fact that children 6 can't vote either, right.

7 And there are all kinds of people who 8 are ineligible for other reasons and there are 9 all kinds of people who don't vote, right. I 10 mean you are never going to have a system where 11 every district has the same number of voters 12 because that's going to change from election to 13 election.

14 But as he said, this idea has been kind 15 percolating for a while on the right. And you 16 have seen kind of efforts by activists on the 17 right to try to litigate their way into those 18 issues and sue jurisdictions that draw districts
19 and based on equal numbers of people and say, uh-20 huh, you can't count all people you have to 21 exclude the non-citizens. And those cases
22 haven't succeeded and a Supreme Court case a few

245

247

1 years ago Evenwell from Texas ruled that states
2 are not required to draw districts with equal 3 numbers of citizens.

4 But the Supreme Court's decision left
5 open whether or not states are permitted to do
6 so. And I think the fear that we have is that 7 some state or county is going to come back in the 8 next cycle and do precisely that. And if you can 9 imagine a place like Texas, very perversely, 10 right getting all this new representation in 11 Congress on the basis of its burgeoning non-12 citizen population saying thank you for that.
13 And now, we're not going to count you, and we're 14 only going to give representation to citizens.
15 It would be pretty devious.

16 I think, and maybe I'm naïve, I think 17 that's a bridge too far, right? But it seems 18 like a pretty, pretty bald-face hypocrisy to try 19 to get away with something like that at the state 20 level.

21 But it would not surprise me, and in 22 fact I would expect that there will some local 246

1 jurisdictions, some county that's had a really 2 large increase in its non-citizen population in 3 the last decade worried about what kind of 4 political ramifications that's going to have in 5 terms of the existing power structure and say, 6 uh-huh, we don't want to count them. That will 7 engender a lawsuit I think, and it could go to 8 the Supreme Court at that point and I think it 9 would be a pretty tough case to win.

10 AUDIENCE: What partnerships do you
11 have or strategies do you have to deal with the 12 actual grass roots that drove registration and 13 promoting that regarding specific districts to 14 counter this? You're fighting the rules and 15 you're (inaudible) from participating. But that 16 doesn't mean there doesn't have to be (inaudible) 17 energy on the grass roots level to actually get 18 people to vote.

19 And I didn't know whether you're 20 partnering with that or whether that's something 21 that you would be interested in doing. I say 22 that because for several decades I've been

1 working to try (inaudible).

2 So the new software technology to 3 bridge communities. To get people to link to 4 help each other (inaudible) kids to school, do
5 homework so that a strategy that has not just a 6 voting agenda, but a strategy that has a 7 community building agenda that's independent 8 might get independent foundation support. And 9 the technology is already -- it's available. I'm 10 simply saying you don't have to spend money 11 (inaudible). I've spent three decades developing 12 it.

13 MS. RIGGS: There are networks now like 14 there haven't been in the past. C3 coordination 15 at the state level, they're usually called state 16 C3 tables where we see folks pooling resources, 17 pooling their energies and their talents to 18 communicate with each other. And just in North 19 Carolina we use our C3 table for all kinds of 20 engagement activities, civic engagement 21 activities.

22 We've pushed early voting advocacy at

248

1 the county level. We have, you know, every 2 county considers its early voting plan, the 3 number of sites to have and we turn folks out en 4 masse to these meetings. Folks are excited, and 5 these are the same people were going to go back 6 to and say look at this online redistricting 7 platform. We're going to provide you with the 8 data you need to look at your redistricting maps 9 and plans in your community.

10 I think as frustrating as some of the 11 legal stuff has been in the last decade, what 12 I've seen is a real commitment both in how we 13 work with grassroots groups and how the 14 philanthropy world works realizing that yes, I 15 wish there were funding for 10 times as many of 16 us, but putting money in the hands of folks on 17 the grounds you can get excited to make change, 18 can use this new technology to monitor what's 19 going on and to fight back. And to try and 20 mitigate some of the state level, or even local 21 level legislation that's harmful. That is -- 22 we're making good progress on that.

249

251

1 AUDIENCE: The destruction of the 2 census case, just reminds me that I've never -- I 3 can't remember anything quite like it where the 4 Court didn't believe the government. They just 5 didn't believe it I mean (inaudible) go with the 6 presumption (inaudible) most of the time. I just 7 wondered if there's any growth in that because 8 the Court finally saw -- every once in a while 9 the Court sees something they've been told about.
10 I wonder if there's any future in challenging 11 the word of the government.

12 MR. HO: It's so interesting where we 13 are right now because I remember when I was 14 (inaudible) just starting as a civil rights 15 lawyer and the urge not to bring cases or bring 16 claims that called into question the government's 17 motives. Right, you're never going to get 18 conservative judges to go with you on that.
19 You're not even going to get moderate liberal 20 judges to go with you on that.

21 You've got to bring claims of based on 22 the impact, you know, whatever the intent may

1 whether or not the president had the authority
2 under the Immigration and Naturalization Act. So 3 it was still kind of narrow statutory, almost a 4 procedural claim then it was more about intent.

5 And the Court kind of looked the other 6 way and said well, you know, we know that some 7 things have been said, or tweeted perhaps but, 8 you know, within the four corners of this 9 document it's (inaudible) invalid so we're just 10 going to accept it.

11 And we have the same internal debates 12 in the census case as we were going up to the 13 Supreme Court. But for the first time I started 14 hearing more people saying you have to emphasize 15 intent here. If you just tell them that there 16 was some evidence that the secretary should have 17 paid attention to but he didn't that's not going 18 to give the chief enough of a concern to feel 19 like he needs to step in here and stop something.

20 And I was almost tempted at one point,
21 maybe if I had had 30 more seconds at the podium 22 I would have said it, to say there's not a single

250

252

1 have been it's got an improper impact and you can 2 strike it down on that basis without calling 3 anyone names or hurting anyone's feelings, right.
4 And that had -- had, for a time continue to be 5 the advice that we were getting. Maybe it 6 started changing after the Shelby County where we 7 were may be getting advised to go ahead and make 8 an intent to argument to give the Court some 9 suspicion of what's happening. But you're still 10 not going to get a court to strike down something 11 on the basis of improper intent.

12 And in the North Carolina case that 13 Allison argued at the Fourth Circuit where the 14 Fourth Circuit unanimously found that the North 15 Carolina legislature acted with "surgical 16 precision" in targeting black voters, right. It 17 was kind of like a wake-up call, to me at least.

18 And I think we're still in a lowercase
19 conservative in taking these kinds of risks 20 Muslim band litigation, you know, there was an 21 equal protection constitutional claim there but 22 the bulk of the action was on the question of

1 person in this room that thinks that this 2 Administration is going to all this trouble
3 because it wants a better Voting Rights Act to 4 enforce.

5 I mean seriously. Just get real for 6 one second. It was good that I didn't because we 7 won. So -- but you know, I do think going 8 forward particularly with an administration that 9 has made what had previously been subtext into 10 text, it might be a fruitful pursuit to try to 11 focus more on intent.

12 MR. GREENBAUM: I really -- I don't say 13 this much but all of our cases that get to the 14 Supreme Court, even though I think we should win
15 them all, the census case should have been a 9/0
16 decision. It really should have. And I think it 17 doesn't speak well for the Justices that didn't 18 go our way. I mean the behavior here was 19 outrageous and you had four Justices that were 20 willing to sign off on that.

21 MR. HO: But I think it speaks to how 22 gun shy we've been about these kinds of issues.

253

255

1 I mean their conduct was outrageous, as Jon says,
2 but even then, you know, the lead argument that I
3 was making in the Supreme Court was a very dry, 4 kind of technical. The evidence says this but 5 these Secretary ignored it. And I think it's may 6 be we're at a context now where we need to be a 7 little bolder.

8 MR. GREENBAUM: And I can say this now,
9 but we thought that the more aggressive argument 10 should've been made on motive.

11 MR. HO: Well, we did make it, right.

12 MR. GREENBAUM: No, but I -- but you 13 didn't emphasize it. Without getting into the 14 details it was sort of embedded in your brief, 15 and our view was that was the out front argument
16 that -- and you know, we got the right result.
17 And you did do a great job.

18 19 MR. YEOMANS: Okay, Herman. You have 20 the microphone.

21 MR. SCHWARTZ: Yeah, I just wanted to 22 say that in the citizenship case you say you

1 unbelievable. With all of this evidence in the 2 newspapers, all over the place, the estranged
3 daughter, boy --

4 AUDIENCE: That's crazy.

5 MR. SCHWARTZ: (inaudible) out that 6 Hofeller, who by the way was a genius at this 7 districting, and was known as the Republican 8 districter. He worked with North Carolina very 9 closely. The net effect for the Court would have 10 been sort of like the Affordable Care Act. This 11 is a bridge too far.

12 MR. GREENBAUM: I think you're right.
13 But I'll say something about the oral argument.
14 With Chief Justice Roberts when he's strongly 15 against you, you know it, right. I mean he comes 16 out firing. He did not come out firing in this 17 case. I mean something held him back.

18 I agree with you that probably after 19 the argument it was probably 5/4 against us. But 20 he was -- he was holding back. Maybe even 21 knowing that something might come out.

22 MS. RIGGS: I thought that was true

254

256

1 don't know whether the revelation about Hofeller
2 had anything to do with it. There revelation, I 3 checked was in April. I think after your 4 argument?

5 MR. GREENBAUM: It was.

6 MR. SCHWARTZ: And although Roberts
7 didn't say, and of course judging by the oral 8 argument you guys were going to lose. I mean 9 they almost dismissed -- what are you talking 10 about? We don't go behind the Secretary of 11 Commerce when he says he has to do that. I mean 12 they're just not going -- the Muslim case the 13 same thing. We're not going to go behind.

14 And then, there is a line in which 15 Judge Henry Friendly is quoted in which it is 16 said, something about, "We should not be naïve 17 about what's really going on" in paren. So you 18 put it all together. If there hadn't been that 19 stuff revealed, if it had been revealed and the 20 Court came out the way it did it's interesting, 21 Roberts you think changed his mind.

22 The Court would have just looked

1 because the Chief Justice came after me hard in 2 the Texas case and was very quiet in partisan
3 gerrymandering case. But one positive lesson I
4 learned from the Hofeller situation is these guys
5 are not smart enough to keep quiet. Dr. Hofeller
6 had spent his career telling people not to email 7 anything. And apparently he didn't follow his 8 own advice.

9 So I think, you know, in these next few 10 years we really have to devote -- I mean it's not 11 like we were, you know, taking the lazy out on 12 discovery battles. But I think we've got to push 13 the front on legislative privilege and try and 14 get some of this stuff that is proving the true 15 intent and creates this atmosphere where it would 16 be just beyond the pale to be that naïve.

17 MR. SCHWARTZ: It wasn't Hofeller who 18 emailed. It was stuff in his files. He kept 19 quiet.

20 MS. RIGGS: According to David Dailey
21 he's got one email in there that's pretty bad. I 22 don't see (inaudible).

257

259

1 MR. YEOMANS: Okay. Well, I think
2 we're out of --
3 PROFESSOR SAEZ: I mean, I don't see
4 any more questions coming.
5 MR. YEOMANS: Okay. All right. Well,
6 please join me in thanking our panel.
7

8 PANEL 4

9 COMPARATIVE CONSTITUTIONALISM:
10 FROM THEORY TO PRACTICE

11 MR. LAGUARDA: Okay. Welcome back
12 everybody. We are going to get started with our 13 last panel of the day.

14 We're going to get started with our 15 last panel of the day. Thank you very much. And 16 without further ado, I would like to introduce my 17 colleague, vice-dean Susan Carle who will be 18 moderating the panel.

19 MS. CARLE: Good afternoon everyone. I 20 think you will find that we have left among the 21 best for last here. We are really excited about 22 this panel, really excited about looking at

258

1 Herman's contribution in this amazing area of 2 law.
3 I am going to start by introducing the 4 panelist, and I am going to do it in the order in 5 which they are going to speak. We have had a few 6 conference calls to sort of figure out how to 7 best structure this panel.

8 So starting that my immediate left, I
9 would like to introduce AE Dick Howard who is the 10 Warren Booker Distinguished Professor of 11 International law at the University of Virginia.

12 He is a widely acknowledged expert in 13 the fields of constitutional law, comparative 14 constitutionalism and the Supreme Court. He is a 15 graduate of the University of Richmond and 16 received his law degree at the University of 17 Virginia. He was a Rhodes Scholar at the 18 University of Oxford, and he was a law clerk to 19 Hugo L. Black of the U.S. Supreme Court.

20 He was executive director of the 21 commission that wrote Virginia's current 22 constitution, and directed the successful

1 referendum campaign for its ratification. He has 2 been counsel to the General Assembly of Virginia 3 and a consultant to too many state and federal 4 bodies to name.

5 He is the author of many books,
6 articles, and monographs including the Road from 7 Runnymede Magna Carta and the Constitution, and 8 constitutionalism in America. And commentaries
9 on the Constitution of Virginia which one a Phi 10 Beta Kappa prize. More recent works include 11 Democracy's Dawn and Constitution Making in 12 Eastern Europe, which will be the subject of this 13 panel.

14 He has briefed and argued cases before 15 state and federal courts including the Supreme 16 Court of the United States. He is a regular 17 guest on many television shows and he has been 18 often consulted by constitutional drafts of 19 persons in other states and abroad. He has 20 worked with revisions on new constitutions in 21 Brazil, Hong Kong, the Philippines,
22 Czechoslovakia, Poland, Romania, Russia, Albania,

260

1 Malawi, and South Africa.
2 And I could go on. So he will be 3 speaking to sort of layout in general in a broad 4 overview the work of reformers in Eastern Europe
5 after the fall of the Iron Curtain, and the 6 attempts to establish Democratic 7 constitutionalism in Eastern Europe, and also 8 successes and failures and where all of that 9 ended up.

10 Second, Mark S. Ellis will be speaking.
11 He is the executive director of the 12 International Bar Association, which is the 13 foremost international organization of bar 14 associations. It is made up of law firms and 15 individual lawyers and currently has about 190
16 national bar associations, major international 17 law firms and 80,000 individual members from all 18 around the world. Prior to joining the IBA, Mark 19 spent 10 years as the first executive director of 20 the Central European and Eurasian Law Initiative, 21 or CEELI, which I expect we will hear quite a bit 22 about on this panel.

261
1 CEELI is a project of the American Bar
2 Association and what it does is provides 3 technical legal assistance to 28 countries in 4 central Europe and the former Soviet Union and to 5 the international criminal tribunal for the 6 former Yugoslavia and the Hague. It remains one 7 of the most extensive international pro bono 8 legal assistance projects ever undertaken by the 9 U.S. legal community.

10 Mr. Ellis also served as legal advisor
11 to the independent legal commission of Kosovo.
12 He advised on the creation of Serbia's war crimes 13 tribunal. He was actively involved with the 14 Iraqi high tribunal and also acted as legal 15 consultant to the define team of Nuan Jea
16 (phonetic) at the Cambodian war crimes tribunal.

17 He has been admitted to the list of 18 witnesses to the council of international 19 criminal court, appointed to the UN created 20 advisory panel on matters related to defense 21 counsel of the mechanism for international 22 criminal tribunals.

262
1 He's a long-time consultant to the 2 World Bank on investment policies in central and 3 eastern European -- eastern Europe and the former 4 Soviet Union and he has served as an adjunct
5 professor at Catholic University, Columbus School 6 of law and is presently an adjunct professor at 7 the Florida State University College of Law.

8 He has been twice a Fulbright Scholar,
9 earned his JD and bachelor of science degrees 10 from Florida State University and an PhD from 11 King's College. And I could go on and on, but 12 there is not time.

13 Last, but certainly not least Vici
14 Jackson will speak. Vicki Jackson is the 15 Thurgood Marshall professor of constitutional law
16 at Harvard Law School. She writes and teaches 17 about U.S. Constitutional law and comparative 18 constitutional law. She is author of the 19 Constitutional Engagement in a transnational Era.
20 And co-author of comparative constitutional law, 21 a leading course book in the field. She has 22 written on the constitutional aspects of 263

1 federalism, gender equality, election law, free 2 speech, sovereign immunity, courts and judicial 3 independence. She has written about the 4 methods -- the logical challenges and comparative 5 constitutional law.

6 Her books include Federalism and two 7 edited collections, Federal Court Stories and 8 Defining the Field of Constitutional Law as well 9 as inside the Supreme Court, the Institution and 10 Its Procedures. Her scholarly projects include 11 Normative Conceptions of the Role of Elected 12 Officials in a Democracy, Proportionality and 13 constitutional Law and Interpretation, gender 14 equality and the interaction of international and 15 domestic law, and the co-evolution of the 16 constitutional of international law and the 17 internationalization of constitutional law.

18 She has very recently the president --
19 I could go on and on, and see I am embarrassing 20 her. Very recently the president of the American 21 Law Schools or the director -- the president of 22 the American Association of Law Schools in which

264
1 she visited our school and gave a very lovely
2 talk at the National People of Colors conference.
3 And she's also served on the executive committee 4 of the International Association of 5 Constitutional Law. And I could go on and on 6 even more, but I think I would rather leave the 7 time for our panelists.

8 So we'll start with Professor Howard.

9 PROFESSOR HOWARD: Susan, thank you
10 very much. It's really a thrill to get together 11 with other people here and from around the 12 country to pay tribute to one of my most special 13 friends and someone for whom I've had deep 14 respect and admiration, having worked together in 15 central and eastern Europe.

16 It goes back 30 years now, believe it 17 or not. But it was a real threshold in my 18 understanding of other parts of the world. So I 19 want to join others in saying, well done, Herman.

20 Thirty years it has been. That's pretty 21 remarkable that we -- I think many of us in the 22 room will remember that time that after the rise

265
1 of solidarity in Poland that the Berlin Wall came 2 down and in a remarkably short time regimes,
3 communist regimes in central and eastern Europe,
4 in effect, collapsed.
5 And my first introduction to that part 6 of the world was when the State Department called 7 me one day; this was in 1988. The Berlin Wall 8 had not yet come down. And asked me if I would 9 spend two days with a delegation if Hungarian 10 constitutional drafters and I said you've got to 11 be kidding. I mean this is a communist country.
12 What kind of constitution will they write and 13 what would I possibly have to contribute.
14 Well, they came down and we spent a 15 couple of days talking about what do you do when 16 you write a constitution? I was then invited to 17 Budapest. This was still 1988 and I could sense 18 change in the air. It was really quite 19 remarkable. I said something is going on here.
20 You could see students down in the metro stations 21 handing out leaflets and the like. And then, of 22 course, as 1989 came along things really began to

266
1 unravel.
2 One thing that I learned and I want
3 this to be feel like a light motif from my remarks
4 this afternoon, is how much a country's history
5 matters. How contextual constitutions are that 6 they depend so much on history and tradition, and 7 culture and mentality and there's no sort of one 8 size fits all.
9 I remember having dinner one evening
10 with friends in Budapest, Hungarian friends. And 11 I asked them about the revolution of 1848 and 12 there was a cafe called the Cafe Pilhock
13 (phonetic) where the liberals and the reformers 14 and all hang around and have coffee and the like 15 and talked about what might happen.
16 And I said I'm curious to know whether 17 that cafe still exists. Maybe it's still not 18 even a cafe anymore, but I would sort of like to 19 see places where historic things happen. So when 20 I asked that question, a Hungarian woman sitting 21 at the table turned to her friends, pointed at 22 me, and said, there I told you he was Hungarian.

267
1 I had no Hungarian blood that I know
2 about for sure, but the message was clear. You
3 had to be Hungarian to care that much about 4 Hungarian history. And that, to me, I could tell 5 other stories like that, but that's fairly 6 typical of these small countries and how 7 intensely caught up they are in their own 8 experience.
9 Now, mind you, as drafters of 10 constitutions in the region went about their 11 work, in many ways they were drawn to western 12 models, especially the German basic law to 13 documents like the United Nations declaration, 14 the European Convention of Human Rights. They 15 clearly were looking to the west because they 16 wanted desperately to be readmitted to the family
17 of Europe from which they had been wrenched 18 during the time of communism.
19 So the principles that they brought 20 into play were familiar ones to people in the 21 West, free and fair elections, a free press, 22 independent judiciary, a checks and balances

268
1 constitutional supremacy. I mean those were all
2 part of the general bargain. And they did ask 3 for advice.
4 Now how important this was, one can 5 only surmise, but they did have advisors both 6 from the United States and from Western Europe.
7 And foremost among those advisors, I have to say,
8 work teams that were put together by CEELI. By 9 what was then called the Central and Eastern Law
10 Initiative, the inspiration Homer Moyer and Sandy 11 D'Albarte and sitting here at the table, Mark 12 Ellis.
13 And I am very confident in saying that 14 among all the advice teams of that work to be 15 seen in the capitals of central and eastern 16 Europe CEELI was the gold standard. I mean that 17 was the best of the lot. And it was during that 18 time that I came to know Herman. We had met 19 before, but we hadn't really worked together on 20 any projects. And I came to realize that he was 21 the gold standard among the individual advisors.
22 If CEELI was the best group, Herman was 271

1 the best individual. He was seasoned, he was 2 wise, he was thoughtful, he had a perspective
3 that very few people did. And in particular, 4 unlike so many Americans who got on airplanes and 5 flew off to places like Budapest and Prague, he 6 understood where he was. He understood the 7 people and their history and their politics, and 8 their mentality, and it was a blessing to the 9 rest of us who worked with him.

10 Now, he -- I see Wendy is here and 11 others who worked in that area. We will remember 12 what an incredibly exciting time it was. I mean 13 it was like sort of a springtime of nations. It 14 was like being in Philadelphia in 1776, or being 15 in Europe in 1848. You had a sense of 16 exuberance, of walls coming down literally, as 17 well as figuratively.

18 Of new beginnings, and you will 19 remember, many of you will remember the heady
20 optimism of that time. This was when Francis 21 Fukuyama, wrote his famous book called the end of 22 history in the last land. You may remember in

1 student. And he made a famous speech at the time
2 of the reburial of Imre Nagy calling for free
3 elections and for the Soviets to get out, and go
4 home. And it was really electrifying.

5 Well, today a very different Viktor
6 Orban is on the scene. He proclaims that 7 Europe's liberal consensus is at an end. He says
8 Hungary is, and I think he coined the phrase, a 9 liberal democracy. And so he sees himself as a 10 buffer against the bureaucrats in Brussels and 11 George Soros and migrants and others.

12 I think Viktor Orban's journey is one 13 of the most remarkable transformations in modern 14 European history. And it's also a story, I 15 think, with a moral, and that is how the 16 transition to democratic constitutional 17 government in central and eastern Europe which, 18 after the admission of those countries to the 19 European Union seemed to most of us, or many of 20 us at least, to be irreversible. That they were 21 on a course tied to the West.

22 It seems to me it's beginning to 270

272

1 that book that he predicted that Western liberal 2 democracy was the wave of the future. It would 3 sweep the globe. It might take longer in places 4 like China and Russia, but that's where we were 5 headed. That was the sort of optimism that 6 carried people in that time.

7 Well, nobody talks that way anymore. I
8 mean do you here, I mean even Fukuyama has sort 9 of, I think, reversed course with some of his 10 predictions. But the widely shared optimism 11 about liberal constitutional democracy is being 12 undermined as we speak by nationalism, by 13 populism, by xenophobia, by anti-globalism.

14 And I wanted to give one specific 15 example. I could give others, but I'm going to 16 talk about Hungary is simply a case study because 17 it's one of the places that I did work and had 18 the most memorable experiences.

19 When I was there, I met a then unknown
20 graduate student. I think he was 26 years old, 21 whose name was Viktor Orban. You may know the 22 name Viktor Orban. Well, he was just a graduate

1 unravel. I'm not saying that they have gone all 2 the way back, that would be overreaching. But 3 certainly there is a threat, it seems to me to 4 the consensus that we had taken for granted.

5 You may know of events in Hungary; how 6 Orban's party, Fidez won -- the curious electoral 7 system of Hungary is hard to describe. But they 8 won an election with a little over half the 9 votes, but got two thirds of the seats in 10 parliament. And in Hungary, you can amend the 11 Constitution by a two thirds vote of Parliament.

12 And so what Orban and his colleagues
13 have done is basically piece that by piece 14 dismantled many of the components of 15 constitutional democracy. Attacks on the media, 16 undermining checks and balances by putting his 17 favorites in various majors offices. Gutting the 18 constitutional court which at one time was one of 19 the great, great constitutional courts of that 20 region, now, it's made up entirely of judges 21 appointed by Fidez.

22 Crony capitalism, he doles out favors.

1 Elections are taking place in gerrymandered
2 districts. Of course, I should pull off to say 3 one should not be too quick to judge Hungary if 4 gerrymandered districts are undermining
5 democracy. We know something about that in this 6 country.

7 But one of the things that struck me
8 about Hungary and some other countries is how 9 they played the victim card. Hungry, you may 10 know was on the losing side of World War I, and 11 at the Treaty of Trianon they lost something like 12 two thirds of their territory. And so there are 13 1 million or 2 million ethnic Hungarians today 14 who live outside of Hungary. They live in 15 Romania and other bordering countries. And the 16 Hungarians simply have not forgotten that.

17 And Orban, for example, conferred
18 voting rights on those ethnic Hungarians in 19 neighboring countries, and you may be sure they, 20 in turn, vote for Fidez.

21 Now, I would love to talk about Poland, 22 but time will permit me walking you through, but

274

1 all the devices that that Orban has used in 2 Hungary, you will find have been used in Poland
3 by the Law of Justice party. They have pretty 4 much played the same card. Indeed, they look out
5 for each other in European union circles.

6 Poland, the Law and Justice department
7 is very good at thriving on cultural and identity 8 politics. Poland, as the bastion of traditional 9 values against the sort of free thinking ideas 10 that come out of Brussels. And if there is an 11 interesting Polish national mythology; there was 12 a 19th century Polish poet who once described 13 Poland as a being the Christ of nations.

14 And you have this image of Poland being 15 crucified on a cross. And the story is that here
16 is Poland, the bastion of Western Christian 17 civilization against the Ottoman hordes and they 18 have bled for the people of Europe and what kind 19 of thanks to they get? The Europeans don't give 20 them the time of day.

21 The Poles, in particular have a very 22 strong sense of what it means to be Polish. The

1 Polish nation, after all -- the Polish state I 2 should say disappeared in the third great 3 partition in 1795 and didn't reappear on the map 4 of Europe until 1918. And yet the idea of the 5 Polish nation was kept alive during all that 6 time. So the Poles see the whole idea of Poland 7 as being fragile.

8 So what's going on in those countries,
9 in my judgment, can be amplified and generalized 10 to suggest transit global, that I'm increasingly 11 worried about. The three trends that I think are 12 important. First, is the resurgence of 13 nationalism. And by nationalism I mean the 14 notion that the nation has an internal, sort of a 15 special core different from everybody else. And 16 that that core has to be defended against other 17 people. And often invoking a past that's 18 sometimes mythologized.

19 Secondly, populism, a powerful force.
20 Populace, I think that's the vote in -- and my 21 English friends I've tried to get them to explain 22 Brexit. I think populism had a lot to do with

276

1 that, the tabloids there attack the English 2 judges as a being enemies of the people, which 3 used to be Stalin's language in the Soviet Union.
4 So populist politicians talk about the 5 corruption of elites and how conspiracies are at 6 play.

7 And then finally, and I think this may 8 be the most powerful, or the most troubling 9 trend, if you like. And that is the rise of 10 authoritarianism as an alternative to the liberal 11 state. And by authoritarianism, I think if it 12 has certain earmarks, certain indicia, they would 13 include first majoritarianism, the notion that 14 elections yield a mandate, in effect, that checks 15 and balances are not to be respected.

16 Secondly, to have state or oligarchy
17 control of the economy. Similarly you control 18 the media whether it's public or private, to have 19 it echo the state line. Suppressing in NGOs, 20 especially if they receive any money from 21 outside, to make them register, to drive them 22 out. This is the story of Central European 277

279

1 University which has had to leave Budapest and go
2 to Vienna.

3 Dictatorship of the law. This is a
4 striking phenomenon. Here in a law school, this 5 is something that's used in a lot of countries, 6 and that is to take the form of the law to 7 suppress your enemies. Turkey for (inaudible),
8 Turkey for example has, in the criminal code a 9 section that makes it a criminal offense to 10 insult Turkishness. Well, I don't know what that 11 means.

12 It basically means whatever the 13 prosecutor and a friendly judge take it to mean.
14 So you may be sure that journalists and scholars 15 and others have been punished under that 16 particular heading.

17 Revising history. This is something 18 that textbooks get rewritten to parrot the 19 prevailing party's story. So these are powerful 20 forces. We see them at their zenith in places
21 like China and Russia. The more oppressive 22 countries become more repressive yet. Democratic 278

1 states become illiberal democracies.

2 And so it makes me think of looking 3 even further back; how in the years since World
4 War II, think of how genuine constitutional
5 liberal democracy was in 1945, and then how it 6 spread through Japan and Germany, through the 7 Mediterranean in the 1970s. Through countries
8 like Chile and Argentina in the 1980s, Central 9 and Eastern Europe of course wholesale after 10 1989.

11 The burgeoning spread. It seems to me
12 for the first time in recent years there's been a 13 bit of a decline, and maybe it's a decade of 14 decline if you like.

15 So I don't want to end on a pessimistic
16 note, but I do want to end on a note of one 17 should certainly take account of these trends, 18 and I'm going to be intrigued to see whether in 19 our discussion this afternoon we have any 20 thoughts about what our response ought to be.

21 Susan, thank you.

22 MS. CARLE: Thank you very much. Next,

1 we will turn to Mark.

2 MR. ELLIS: Thank you very much.

3 When you go to a high school and 4 college reunion there's always that prize for who 5 traveled the furthest. And I woke up this 6 morning at 5:00 this morning in Seoul, South 7 Korea. I'm telling you I win. I wouldn't have 8 done that for anybody else but Herman Schwartz.
9 I really wouldn't have. But this is a person who 10 in all my years of friendships with such great 11 respect, admiration, and love for this man. He 12 has had a real impact on my life, and so I'm 13 blessed in knowing him.

14 When we talked (inaudible) about CEELI
15 and Dick had mentioned that sense of Herman being 16 kind of the gold standard and that is absolutely 17 right. But the first time, I think we all met in 18 a more professional capacity was in Prague in 19 Czechoslovakia. And Wendy Lourdes had put 20 together some funding and put together Lloyd 21 Cutler and Herman Schwartz and some others to 22 come into Prague and talk about what

280

1 Czechoslovakia was thinking about at that time,
2 with split or to stay united.

3 And I was fortunate, and I think it was 4 probably hungry and who made the suggestion 5 because CEELI was just beginning to start. We 6 had done a project yet and he asked me to come 7 along. And it was such an important trip because 8 I realized the way Herman had set this program up 9 talking about constitutional issues and legal 10 reform that this was probably the model that 11 CEELI probably needed to follow.

12 So the success of CEELI actually is due 13 to the work of Herman and Dick as well. We 14 brought him in so early and thank goodness we 15 did.

16 When I was preparing my notes on this 17 because it was decided I was going to talk a 18 little bit about the constitutional courts
19 specifically. Both because it's an area that 20 Herman has focused a lot on and because I thought 21 it was intriguing because we were, during -- 22 after 1989 focusing a lot on judicial reform.

281
1 And constitutional courts were quite something 2 that had great attention to.
3 But actually, before '89 there was only 4 two countries in the region that had experimented
5 with these constitutional courts. One was Poland
6 and the other was where I was living at the time, 7 at that time Yugoslavia. But neither of these 8 experiments really indicated that these courts
9 had much authority, much, kind of robust 10 constitutional review at all. That just wasn't 11 the case.

12 But when we look at these 13 constitutional courts and the creation of the 14 courts after '89 and again CEELI was very much 15 involved with the discussions on some of these 16 things. Initially I think these courts still 17 struggled to gain any type of credibility.

18 And specifically within the 19 constitutional law because of course it was all 20 new for everyone, including trying to identify 21 those who were qualified enough to sit on these 22 courts and to be able to make these

282
1 interpretations. But in hindsight, when you look
2 at that particular transitional period, I think 3 these courts played an essential role in 4 contributing to the process of this transition to 5 democracy and did so in a number of vital ways.

6 And it was actually when I was 7 preparing my notes I was looking back at my own
8 notes that I kept during the time and then 9 looking at who has written in this area and 10 actually came up with Herman and Dick, and then 11 later with Vicki. So it's quite extraordinary 12 that you have these individuals here.

13 But Herman had made a comment that 14 several of these states, these new constitutional 15 courts provided an effective political check on 16 the other branches on the national, and sometimes 17 local government. And he said, and diffuse some 18 of the most explosive conflicts both in 19 substantive issues and inner governmental branch
20 issues. I think he was absolutely right.

21 But most importantly, I think they 22 generated a really high degree of respect for the

283
1 primacy of law. And the primacy of the courts in 2 interpreting what that law is and then suggesting 3 that these courts have the authority to make that 4 interpretation. So their mere existence and 5 their survival because that was questioned. That 6 was -- even with the excitement of '89 as Wendy 7 will know, there was uncertainty about exactly 8 how this was going to work.

9 And even Dick, I think, had mentioned 10 some uncertainty about that in some of the 11 countries that we were working in at the time.
12 But, I think, gradually these courts, 13 particularly the courts became really the 14 hallmark of this transformation. And they did so 15 slowly but with increasing authority and the 16 perception that this was the right way of going 17 in providing some type of balance to the 18 government.

19 I too want to just talk just a couple
20 of minutes on Hungary and I've selected Hungary 21 and Poland. Vicki will probably allude to it as 22 well because it's fascinating both with what was

284
1 happening after '89 and what's happening today,
2 and the important role that the courts played 3 then, and what's happening to the courts right 4 now.

5 The Hungarian court really kind of 6 faced its due task of trying to foster legitimacy 7 in this kind of constitutional order. But at the 8 same time preserving its kind of -- as a 9 political entity as well, which these were at the 10 time. And part, I think, of the success from 11 Hungary, and again, Herman refers to this in some 12 of the writings he does -- that he had written.

13 It was because of the fact that Hungary
14 was had the model of this form of communism 15 throughout central and eastern Europe. So the 16 transition was a little easier there and was able 17 to embed more quickly and had a bit more history
18 on that. And I think Herman was right.

19 And it wasn't too far after when the 20 court came and it emerged that all of us out and 21 you realized how powerful the Hungarian court was 22 going to be. And again, when you look back to 285

287

1 the constitutional court, and particularly the 2 powers that were given this court, and this may 3 very well have been some of the earlier work that 4 Dick had done in Hungary as well.

5 But it is quite striking that you had a 6 court that had the authority to strike down not 7 just national but international treaty law, deal 8 with direct conflicts between the state organs
9 and to oversee the impeachment of the president 10 as well. And most importantly, we were able to 11 have constitutional complaints coming directly 12 from citizens. And this ability kind of for the 13 private -- the ability for citizens to go
14 directly to the court is essential, and essential 15 for the success of that court.

16 And I think that at its height the 17 Hungarian constitutional court was really seen as 18 probably the most successful, certainly the most 19 active court in central Europe. Within six years 20 of its creation the court had brought down more 21 than 200 national laws and nearly one third of 22 all those brought before it for review. And many

1 But now, with Orban, you're going to 2 start seeing the reversal to the court. Not only 3 to other aspects but particularly the court. The 4 court was one of the first -- that should give 5 you an indication of how important the court had 6 been for Hungary, it was one of the first areas 7 of that Orban started moving against.

8 And as soon as his party became, and as 9 soon as he came to power, he started turning this 10 court into really a political instrument in 11 support of a government. He started this kind of 12 revolution, or an attack that started stripping 13 back the competencies of the court, its decisions 14 were being overturned by constitutional 15 amendments being pushed by the government. And 16 the bench was beginning to be packed by 17 government appointees.

18 And then I was looking at some of those 19 cases that was coming out and the one that I love 20 is the case regarding the decision on 21 homelessness this last year. I don't know if you 22 have heard about this, but the government had 286

288

1 of those decisions were cutting edge decisions.
2 And decisions that were moving Hungary through 3 this transitional phase into a democratic state.
4

5 Again Herman's observation, "what is 6 especially surprising, given the wide scope and 7 deep impact of the court's decision is the 8 support the court had enjoyed from all sides
9 despite the many criticisms." That is absolutely 10 essential to embed within citizens the 11 understanding of the importance of the court and 12 the respect for the court is something that is 13 transformative for the countries.

14 But then, we moved to not Dick's
15 student because I certainly don't want to say 16 that, but Mr. Orban. And they are, you have -- 17 you begin to shift and you begin to shift pretty 18 dramatically. And I should say before that you
19 had, as I said, the ability of citizens to move 20 directly to the court. That was really essential 21 in Hungary and I think that gave it such 22 significant credibility.

1 decided to initiate some new legislation that 2 said that living in public places on a permanent 3 basis was prohibited. That you just couldn't do 4 that, the homelessness was criminal.

5 So this was a constitutional issue. It 6 came before the constitutional court and the 7 majority of the court, of the justices, the 8 justices now having been placed on there by 9 Orban, said, "According to the value of 10 fundamental law, no one has the right to be poor 11 or homeless. This status is not part of the 12 right to dignity." Quite extraordinary when you 13 read that.

14 But it wasn't just the poor quality of 15 its decision because that's apparent in the 16 wording. But it was because it was and now a 17 political court. And it is a political court.
18 And that was the new transformation that has 19 occurred under Orban.

20 Poland, as Dick says, is very similar,
21 kind of similar in process, although for Poland 22 the constitutional court in the sense of its 289

291

1 authority, its ability to listen or to take cases 2 directly from the citizens didn't come until 3 quite later. It wasn't in 1989 or a few years 4 after, it was really quite late in 1997 actually.

5 But now, with the law, and just as part 6 of it came in, that court too has become a very 7 powerless institution. It was, again, the 8 government's attack pretty quickly on trying to 9 bring back court into the government's fold. And 10 so the court is now considered to be quite 11 friendly to the government, and is viewed as kind 12 of an arm to the government. So rather than it's 13 an institution of objective reasoning, it is 14 simply now an institution for government policy.

15 And this is kind of when I started 16 looking at the statistics it is quite 17 extraordinary. Before this crisis of the court 18 accepted about 5 to 600 cases annually. That 19 started in 2016. The number of cases now have 20 decreased down to 282 as of last year. I have 21 mapped it out, it just kept going down.

22 The court was also known for kind of 290

1 its efficiency. In 2014 alone the court had 2 rendered 110 judgments. That dropped to 73 in 3 2015, and in 2017 it had dropped to 89. And so 4 it's clearly now a court for all purposes it's 5 review mechanism has ceased to exist. It relates 6 only to what the government has asked for.

7 So finally, I just want to conclude 8 because I do live in Europe and the crisis, as 9 Dick says, on nationalism, populism, what can 10 counter the rise in nationalism, as Dick says, or 11 populism or authoritarianism, that history 12 points? And actually it holds within the 13 European Union and the European Court of Justice.

14 And the European Court of Justice,
15 interesting has played, and is playing right now 16 a very important role in countering this 17 development that we're seeing across these 18 countries. And the cases that are now beginning 19 to emerge, and I say now emerging, I'm literally 20 talking about within the last year and a half.
21 These are really important cases coming out that 22 is making it quite clear that from Europe's

1 perspective and from the European Court of 2 Justice's perspective these issues of the 3 independence of the judiciary are paramount to 4 protecting the rule of law. And so these cases 5 are moving.

6 Whether or not the Commission and 7 whether or not Parliament has the sufficient 8 vision and power to strike back at countries like 9 Poland and Hungary is still to be determined.
10 But I think the crisis is there. And I think it 11 has awoken countries to say, not only these 12 countries are in jeopardy, but the European union
13 itself as a body is in jeopardy if these policies 14 and principals that are being set forth by 15 countries like Hungary and Poland are not 16 stopped. And that, to me, is crucial and that's 17 a question that's still unknown as to its answer, 18 but I'm hoping it moves in our direction.

19 I'll stop there. Thank you, Susan.

20 MS. CARLE: Thank you very much Mark.

21 MS. JACKSON: I'm going to stand up
22 because I'm short, and I've been sitting for a

292

1 while.

2 So I am just so honored to be here.
3 Can you hear me okay? All right. To honor a 4 really rare incomparably wonderful human being,
5 scholar and public interest advocate, Herman 6 Schwartz. So thank you for the opportunity to 7 express my great admiration and gratitude as you 8 will come to hear.

9 So we're back in the early 1990s and I
10 am on unpaid leave following the addition of a 11 third child to our family. And Herman Schwartz 12 calls me. I had met Herman through our mutual 13 friend, David Silverman, who I think is going to 14 be here later today. And so we are in the early 15 '90s and Herman calls me up and he says Vicki, I 16 want you to come to a conference in Prague. And 17 maybe also Salzburg, I can't quite remember.

18 And the conference is on making a new 19 constitution in a country that at the time I 20 thought of as being called Czechoslovakia. Now, 21 as you know from my colleagues Czechoslovakia was 22 the site of the so-called Velvet Revolution. The 293

1 peaceable displacement of communist control over
2 the country inspired by the leadership of Vaclav
3 Havel and the (inaudible) and made possible by 4 the Soviet withdrawal.

5 And the country was embarked on a
6 constitution making process. Now when Herman 7 called me I was a both very surprised and very 8 flattered. I was, as yet, and on tenured law 9 professor at Georgetown. And I had written, as 10 far as I can remember, on late on U.S.

11 Constitution law issues. But I was quite 12 interested in constitutional change and in the 13 federalism. Herman and I might have talked about 14 these over various dinners that we had had.

15 And want some domestic details had been 16 worked out with this new-born and two other 17 children, thanks to my incredibly supportive
18 spouse who is also here today, I accepted.

19 And I owe a great deal to Herman
20 because it was through this trip that I first 21 became completely fascinated by constitutional 22 experiences elsewhere, leading me within that

294

1 decade to produce both an edited collection and 2 casebook on comparative constitutional law with 3 my then Georgetown, and now Harvard colleague 4 Mark Tushnet. And then becoming active in the 5 field.

6 So going back again to the early '90s,
7 after I said yes to the invitation to what I
8 thought was a country called Czechoslovakia, I 9 learned, when I went to get the visa that the 10 country's name had become something like the 11 Czech and Slovak Federal Republic. A small 12 harbinger of the much larger changes to come.
13 For by late 1992, within a year or two of this 14 the two parts had separated, each becoming its 15 own independent country.

16 Now, right before I traveled to Prague
17 I was given a draft constitution, one of many 18 to review on federalism issues. And I recall 19 many conversations with Herman as he tried to 20 educate me on the history of this country, about 21 which I had formerly known nothing. And it was 22 through these conversations and what I learned

295

1 while I was in Prague, which was the capital of 2 the Czech and Slovak Federated Republic, that I
3 first started to think about and realize how much 4 local knowledge is needed really to understand
5 another country's constitution, a point that Dick 6 Howard made, also.

7 And I believe I learned a great deal
8 from you also at those conferences, Dick.

9 And my experiences there also 10 contributed to my thinking about federalism,
11 giving me an appreciation of the role of what I 12 will call existing power holders. Informing 13 federal systems. What do I mean? So I recall 14 one discussion with Herman in which I rather 15 naively raised the possibility of envisioning a 16 federal republic for this country that would have 17 more than two parts. That is, of using other 18 geographic boundaries, not just between the Czech
19 part and the Slovak part, but trying to break it 20 up into smaller multiple parts.

21 Because I said to him bipolar
22 federations are likely to be very unstable.

296

1 Well, yeah. Yeah, I mean that's (inaudible)
2 Czechoslovakia. But Herman explained to me why 3 this idea would be totally impractical given the 4 history and looking --

5 People can't hear me?

6 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Yeah, it's
7 (inaudible).

8 MS. JACKSON: Should I stop or can I
9 keep going? I'm going to keep going. Can you 10 hear me?

11 AUDIENCE: Yeah.

12 MS. JACKSON: I'm looking, looking at 13 the perspective of the delegation. Let me know 14 if you can't hear me. Can you hear me?

15 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Yeah.

16 MS. JACKSON: Looking at it from the 17 perspective of the delegations from the Czech
18 Republic and the Slovak Republic you've got all 19 these people who can envision being governors, or 20 presidents, or heads of their supreme courts.
21 And you have to take that into account if you 22 want a peaceful kind of transition.

297

299

1 And as I listened to the debates while
2 I was there I came even more to appreciate why 3 Herman felt this way. So I'm listening to 4 members of the delegation from the Slovak
5 Republic explained why it was completely,
6 logically, inconceivable that a Supreme Court for 7 the whole country could review the decisions of 8 the highest court of the Slovak Republic a 9 sovereign entity.

10 And it was like being a fly on the wall
11 back at the time of Chief Justice Jon Marshall's 12 tenure at the U.S. Supreme Court. In Martin 13 against Hunter's Lessee, in 1816, and again in 14 1821 in Combs against Virginia, the Marshall 15 court concluded that it could, indeed, exercise 16 appellate jurisdiction over the decisions of the 17 highest court of the state of Virginia.

18 In doing so, our Supreme Court rejected 19 quite vociferous arguments to the contrary by the 20 state of Virginia and by a leading critic of the 21 Marshall Court, Judge Spencer Rome. They argued 22 that any exercise of appellate jurisdiction by

298

1 the U.S. Supreme Court was inconsistent with 2 Virginia's sovereignty. And honestly, listening
3 to these discussions and probably really gave me 4 a much a better understanding of the nature of 5 U.S. constitutional history and what those 6 debates were about in the early 19th century, and 7 how it could have gone in a different direction.

8 Now, my experience in Prague also led 9 me to reach some more general conclusions about 10 the formation of federal systems. And that is, 11 that there will always be very important elements
12 of what we might think of as historic contingency 13 involving who already holds power, and what their 14 history has been. That any given polity will 15 constrain the possibilities for creating federal 16 systems.

17 So when students and scholars say oh,
18 what was the purpose of creating the federal 19 system? You wanted to experiment? You wanted to 20 do this? And I think well yeah, that might be 21 function served, but what with the actual forces 22 leading to the creation? And you have to look at

1 who was at the table. Who had the power to gum 2 up the works?

3 All right so those are some of the 4 things I learned as a result of my encounters
5 with Herman and the country that was once called 6 Czechoslovakia.

7 And there was one other sort of 8 substantive comment as I'm coming close to -- and 9 near the end. And that is on the role of 10 outsiders. Foreign legal experts in three areas, 11 constitution making as Herman, and Dick, and 12 Mark, and I, to a very limited extent, were 13 involved in. Constitutional interpretation and 14 constitutional adjudication.

15 And in that my academic work I have 16 considered the role of outsiders in 17 constitutional interpretation and adjudication.
18 Now, what do I mean? Well, on interpretation 19 when the OAS, or the U.S. or the UN decides that, 20 for example, Honduras has had a rupture from its 21 own democratic constitutional order as occurred 22 in 2009, those outsiders are reaching a decision

300

1 about what the Honduran Constitution provides for 2 in the way of removing a president and appointing 3 a successor. It's a big mess in Honduras. I
4 won't go into the details.

5 But when countries are reacting this 6 way that's what they're looking at. Did this 7 happen legitimately, or was this some sort of a 8 pseudo-coup? They are in effect interpreting the 9 Honduran Constitution, and this happens actually 10 more than you might think when you start looking 11 around the world.

12 Constitutional adjudication. So in a
13 recent co-authored paper I worked on, we studied 14 what we called hybrid constitutional courts such 15 as that in Bosnia-Herzegovina, which is required 16 under the Constitution negotiated as part of the 17 Dayton Accords. To include as members of the 18 court three judges not from any constituent part 19 of that country and appointed by an outsider, the 20 president of the European Court of Human Rights.

21 The highest courts in Fiji as well as 22 in Hong Kong have frequently had foreign judges

301

303

1 sitting on them from other common law
2 jurisdictions and deciding constitutional cases
3 as well as other cases.
4 Now, on constitution making. I was in 5 Prague as a very junior member of a gathering of 6 real giants in the field of constitutional design
7 including such great luminaries as Pierre
8 Trudeau, if memory serves, Lloyd Cutler, Herman 9 Schwartz and, if memory serves, I think maybe 10 Larry Tribe was also there for that one.
11 And while I have not written about that 12 experience, I do want to say that there may be 13 some paired advantages and disadvantages similar 14 to those I haven't written about in other 15 settings when foreign experts become involved in 16 a constitution drafting process.
17 And now, outsiders can bring 18 significant benefits, and I will mention two.
19 One is they may have expertise and knowledge of 20 legal phenomenon that are not as well known in 21 the country they are in. Second, they might be 22 perceived as more impartial. They don't have a

302

1 dog in the fight because they are from outside.
2 They're not going to continue on there.
3 (inaudible) the paired disadvantage is 4 that outsiders may lack crucial local knowledge.
5 And rather than being perceived as more
6 impartial, they might be regarded as foreign 7 interlopers acting, whether consciously or not, 8 more in the interest of their own governments or 9 countries than in the interest of the people who 10 are supposedly engaging in constitution making.
11 Now, this is, I think, a conundrum.
12 It's a balancing act two whose contours I was 13 first introduced by Herman, for which I will be 14 forever grateful. And let me just be clear, I am 15 not trying to suggest that we should stop the 16 enterprise of learning from comparative 17 experience elsewhere. I've devoted a major part 18 of my own scholarly career to that.
19 And as we heard from the two prior 20 speakers, there is -- I don't think they used 21 this word, but there's almost a playbook at work, 22 borrowing a word from Kim Shepley (phonetic),

1 among the illiberal democracies that seem to be 2 emerging, attack the independence of the courts, 3 stifle electoral competition, shut down the 4 press, the Free Press, the independent press.
5 Shut down the free and independent universities 6 or the Academy of science, or Central European 7 University. And these are techniques that are 8 not seen in only one country.
9 And what I would last suggest is 10 something I think Herman's whole career showed an 11 innate appreciation for. Is that if you want to 12 build a good and just constitutional democracy in 13 your own country, you really need to be engaged 14 in the quality of constitutional democracies in 15 other countries. It's really hard to be the 16 only -- to be the only constitutional democracy 17 around, or one of few.
18 So we really have a stake in learning 19 about what's going on in other countries. And 20 figuring out how to sustain what is good and just 21 in our constitutional democracy, and fix what is 22 not. So thank you, Herman, for your many 304

1 contributions to constitutionalism at home and 2 abroad in so many areas. And I'm sure you all 3 join me.
4
5 MS. CARLE: Okay. Well, we have some 6 time for further discussion and questions from 7 the audience. I would take the moderator's 8 prerogative, which is to ask the first question.
9 Which is, we have heard a lot about the 10 hopes and the excitement and the period of 11 optimism about what might happen in eastern 12 Europe and then the sort of results that did not 13 end up quite the way everybody was hoping.
14 And a little bit about what factors
15 contributed to that, and among those context, 16 history, the self-conception of the people, the 17 national identity of the people. Who already 18 held power and what the historical contingencies 19 were. And I wondered if you could expand just a 20 little bit on that and the lessons learned.
21 And also the way in which popular
22 constitutionalism is a part of, or a lack of sort

305

307

1 of a popular conception of what the elites were 2 trying to do in drafting these new constitutions 3 and what the importance of the independence of 4 the courts. To what extent is that one of the 5 factors that we need to look to in thinking about 6 the lessons of this. Yes, go right ahead, 7 everybody.

8 MR. HOWARD: It would take somebody who 9 understood anthropology, history, sociology and 10 other disciplines in a way that I do not. But I 11 sense that one of the trends said that's going 12 on, we see it domestically in this country, and 13 we see it in Western Europe in places like 14 France, the United Kingdom, Germany, we see it
15 certainly in central and eastern Europe, and I 16 think in other places.

17 And that is the sense that the people
18 we dealt with when we went to Prague and Budapest 19 and those cities, we were dealing by and large 20 with the educated elite. The judges, the 21 loggers, they were every bit as good as anybody 22 in the West, no doubt about that. And they were 306

1 just sort of naturally the people you gravitated
2 to, you talked to, you worked with.

3 We didn't go out into the countryside.
4 We didn't go out into the small towns and 5 villages of say eastern Hungary or southern 6 Poland. I don't know much about those places.

7 This is only kind of a hunch that 8 somehow some of the sliding back that we tend to 9 regret is the resurgence of popular feeling among 10 people who feel left out, feel neglected, feel 11 left behind and in many cases economically are.
12 I mean they are also living in very hard times 13 and they attack globalism and the like and they 14 attack the elites in the cities.

15 And that's why, say for Orban in 16 Hungary and for Law and Justice in Poland it's 17 easy to label the elites as being much more 18 comfortable in the drawing rooms of Brussels with 19 people like themselves. They don't really 20 understand ordinary folks like us. This is very 21 popular. I think this is powerful and this may 22 explain, to use the -- to coin the phrase popular

1 constitutionalism. I think this may be one of 2 the factors that is in play.

3 MS. CARLE: Thank you. Any other
4 comments?

5 MR. ELLIS: In London when the Brexit
6 vote happened up until that point I was quite 7 certain that there would be a remaining vote that 8 was very, very certain in my mind. It was only 9 afterwards that I realized why I erred. It was 10 exactly what Dick had just said. Because my 11 input, my information was coming from where I 12 lived in London.

13 And London was not going to exit
14 anything. So the newspapers I read, BBC that I 15 listened to had been slanted and it was an 16 absolute huge disconnect in what was happening 17 outside that. And I do believe Dick is 18 absolutely right in the sense of a disconnect in 19 other countries.

20 I would say that there are real 21 concerns. I don't want to dismiss those who 22 perceive grievances against globalization,

308

1 against economies that are just not working for 2 them anymore. That has to exist in order to be 3 able to turn that into a political movement. And 4 then if you have an Orban, or Horace Johnson or 5 Nigel Farage that's a perfect storm of being able 6 to make that work.

7 And then it's much easier than to bring 8 in disinformation, false allegations and just 9 build up that discontent. So that's point one 10 and point two, I would just say when we could 11 have moved out of central (inaudible) Europe and 12 these countries, whether it's Poland, Hungary,
13 Czech Republic, I wouldn't have ever in for a 14 million dollars thought we would be where we are 15 right now. And I just wouldn't have thought.
16 But one thing that I think had been missing and 17 is missing now, is really about civic education.

18 When you look at the -- and you have to 19 realize it and this is pretty among the younger 20 people, but the younger generation they're long 21 away from 1989. This is two generations in fact 22 that -- but the lack of civic education about the

309

1 principles of the rule of law, the principals of 2 liberal democracy is absent time and time again 3 in the countries. And you can see it in the 4 polling of young people who were pulled into the 5 idea of an authoritarian type of approach.
6 That to me, is scary and that is 7 something that Europe needs to deal with. It's 8 something this country needs to deal with here.
9 MS. CARLE: Thank you.
10 MS. JACKSON: So can I just add?
11 MS. CARLE: Yes.
12 MS. JACKSON: Is it on? Right. So I 13 am not sure, as an empirical matter whether 14 illiberalism correlates with lack of education.
15 I'm just -- query. I took a look at literacy
16 rates from Wikipedia, this great source, and you 17 know if Wiki is right, Poland's ahead of the U.S.
18 and so - -query. I'm just not sure.
19 And I remember ra study I read a long
20 time ago about India and about that Indian 21 democracy lived mostly in the villages, not in 22 the big cities. So I'm just -- I'm not sure

310

1 about education as such.
2 Which is a different question than who 3 you hang out with. So one of the thing is in the 4 world we now live in, all of us hang out much 5 more than we would have 40 years ago, with people 6 who think similarly. We are more likely to be 7 Facebook friends, I mean I don't do Face -- but 8 we're more likely to hang out. Okay. And I think 9 that's true around the world.
10 Which means that one of the phenomenon 11 that's going on here is the radical change in the 12 technology of communication. Change in speed of 13 communication, the fact that someone can come out 14 of nowhere and develop a popular following and 15 win elections without going through intermediary 16 organizations, like political parties. So that's 17 one of the phenomenon.
18 Second, there is huge pressures in the 19 world created by migration. Migration is 20 typically for people who are different from us, 21 and human beings seem to have some capacity to 22 deal with people who are different from them, but

311

1 apparently not infinite capacities. And so we 2 need people who believe in constitutional 3 democracy and the idea of liberal restraints on 4 government need to come up with a way of 5 responding to that.
6 And third, one of my colleagues
7 mentioned the economic pressures as being real, 8 and you know, maybe we are reaping the results of 9 decades of neoliberal economic policy. All of 10 which, I believe, are creating pressures that go 11 into this stew.
12 The last thing I want to say is I don't 13 know that -- so there are still elections held.
14 Now, you know, elections without a free press
15 aren't such reliable indicators.
16 But what's interesting about what's 17 going on in the eastern European countries, 18 people are talking about is that we are not 19 seeing military coups. We are not seeing the 20 tanks are rolling down and a military leader 21 saying no more elections for 10 years. That's 22 not what we're seeing. So it is important to

312

1 these illiberal leaders to win elections and that 2 may offer some possibility for change of 3 direction. Just not to be totally pessimistic 4 care.
5 MR. ELLIS: Susan could I just respond
6 to Vicki a little on this point of education if I 7 could. The issue is not literacy. The issue is 8 literacy and what. If you are not providing the 9 civic education and the principles of 10 democracies, liberal democracies, that's the 11 problem.
12 So if you look at, again, back to that 13 perfect storm. If you have a government that is 14 attacking the judiciary and beginning to alter
15 the judiciary so it's no longer an independent 16 judiciary, a population, citizens, who are 17 willing to allow that, who then buy into that 18 that's the lack of the civic education, of the 19 understanding of the importance of these in very 20 fundamental principles that ensures not only the 21 independence of the judiciary, but the rule of 22 law and democracy.

313

1 That is where I think we are falling
2 away.
3 MS. CARLE: Thank you very much. We 4 want to open it up for questions now, and we 5 already have a queue forming. Herman, do you
6 have anything you want to say? Any comments?
7 Or are you -- this would be very rare
8 but you might be overwhelmed by -- 9 MR. SCHWARTZ: I think that I share a 10 bunch of the thoughts back in 1990, '91, '92 that 11 there would be significant change. But I think 12 that in some ways I'm not surprised by what's 13 happened.
14 We're talking about an area of Europe
15 that has really never known anything like what 16 liberal democracy. Hungary between the wars,
17 earlier Poland these countries were not anything
18 like liberal democracies and the pressures, I 19 haven't followed East Europe closely so I don't 20 really know. But I somehow am not terribly 21 surprised.
22 As to the role of outsiders, I think

314

1 that one of the things I knew right away was that 2 we had a very limited role. This was at their 3 constitutions. We didn't know their languages.
4 We didn't know the legal traditions whereby a 5 word in a constitution, words in our -- each word 6 in our constitution carries a host of prenumbers 7 and traditions. Words are suitcases, and 8 (inaudible) certain kinds of contents. We don't 9 know those.
10 So I saw our role really as very 11 limited. There were some things we could tell 12 them about. Some things they knew without us.
13 For example, one of the things I usually 14 suggested was the notion of an ombudsman. And 15 the Polish ombudsman played a huge role, starting 16 out incidentally on prison issues.
17 One of the things that seemed to me
18 very clear but again, this is only in the 19 constitution, was that try to institutionalize
20 the projections. Write into the constitution 21 that there is a right to resort to a court,
22 that's common in Latin America. We could tell

315

1 them about some of our bad experiences.
2 Our court system was not much of a
3 model. They had constitutional courts which 4 judges sitting on those courts for limited
5 periods of time. They were mostly academics.
6 They were immensely powerful compared to ours.
7 The Polish constitution knocked out a deal that 8 the finance minister had made with tone of the 9 international -- the IMF or with the World Bank.
10 The finance minister resigned, nothing happened
11 to the court.
12 The Hungarian constitutional court in 13 those first many years through out a big chunk of 14 the economic program that had been adopted by the 15 parliament. Nobody complained.
16 In different societies I think we were 17 able to help a little, provide them with certain 18 tips and point out things that had gotten screwed 19 up as far as we knew. We played a very limited 20 role. To some extent, it was useful.
21 I came away being very clear in my mind 22 that what Learned Hand said, constitutions and

316

1 courts cannot save a people. It all depends on 2 what's happening to the people inside. Whether 3 it's migrants, whether it's economic problems
4 it's the surrounding society that makes it
5 possible. Without that, a constitution won't do
6 much. And outsiders certainly won't do much.
7 But those of us involved, as Dick said,
8 had a wonderful time.
9 (Crosstalk)
10 MR. ELLIS: Before quitting, do you
11 remember the one thing that we did add, and this 12 is an interesting historical point. Vicki was 13 talking about constitution making, it's because 14 of these countries were in Europe and they were 15 looking for integrating in Europe. And so we 16 brought in European experts around those tables,
17 if you recall, Dick.
18 Now, that was interesting because we 19 were getting funding CEELI was getting funding 20 from the U.S. government. And I remember going 21 to that meeting and saying I want to get money to 22 pay for Europeans to come in. They didn't like

319

1 that at all. But I think that change the 2 dynamics as well because it allowed us to 3 continue to play the role that you described 4 correctly as simply there to be a sounding board.

5 It said their process, it was their 6 draft, and having Europeans join us, I thought 7 raised the credibility of the process.

8 MR. SCHWARTZ: We had Germans, and I'll 9 just close a little bit.

10 One of our wonderful, unhappily now
11 dead, French friends Roger Rivera (phonetic), 12 Roger said at one point, good constitutions, like 13 good wines, don't travel well.

14 MS. LOURDES: Mark you just -- I'm 15 Wendy Lourdes and my husband was the American 16 ambassador in Prague. We lived there during 17 communism, we got to know most of these people, 18 including Vaclav Havel very, very well. So on 19 the first of January, this is how it all happened 20 and this is why it's important to the history and 21 then how the experts took over.

22 But it was Jan Jaworski, a Slovak who

1 are very different people, these two men. And 2 they became fast friends, of course.

3 And what I was going to say, and Herman 4 just brought this up, and I'm going to follow on 5 this. What they did was an American initiative 6 was to bring the leading and with their roster
7 the former general counsel on the white house, 8 Lloyd, and all of the contacts. They were able 9 to bring the leading jurists from each of the 10 parliamentary countries in Europe to come to 11 Prague and sit with these people and get to know 12 them.

13 And what that Czechslovaks told me
14 afterwards was we had somebody we could call at 15 2:00 in the morning. We had somebody where if we 16 were having a fight we could pick up and call 17 (inaudible). We could call Benkopf (phonetic).
18 We could call any of these other people. That's 19 the part that so important. The shared 20 experience, the American initiative in bringing 21 together -- we (inaudible) a parliament and 22 constitution in this country so you know -- and 318

320

1 had just gotten out of jail two weeks before and 2 was suddenly deputy prime minister of 3 Czechoslovakia and he was suddenly up next to the 4 castle and he invited Bill and me for lunch. We 5 had given an inaugural dinner for Vaclav Havel 6 the night before he became president.

7 And Jan said, hey Wendy, we need to 8 have a constitution and free Czechoslovakia,
9 you're going to help us. And I said Jan, I'm not 10 even a lawyer, how can I possibly help you with 11 your constitution? But we had taken Lloyd Cutler
12 to see Vaclav Havel, the summer before. And I 13 knew about Herman because I had been working for 14 Human Rights Watch in New York. And this is how 15 that all happened.

16 And we picked up the phone and I called 17 Lloyd from Prague and I said how would you like 18 to help the drafting committee and the new 19 parliament to write the constitution. He said 20 I'd love nothing more. Then I married Herman and 21 Lloyd who didn't know each other and ended up on 22 opposite sides of the border situation. And they

1 so they (inaudible) because they don't have a
2 constitution.

3 And so that -- and to prove that it
4 worked is that the Slovaks after they split and 5 this was just two authoritarian figures, Vaclav 6 Havel and Mitchar (phonetic) who decided to 7 split. There was no referendum. There was no
8 vote, there was no nothing.

9 The Slovaks asked Herman and Lloyd and 10 their constitutional group to come and do it for 11 Slovakia, which meant that they didn't see these 12 as interlopers coming in from outside and telling 13 them what to do. And by the way, we did not 14 accept U.S. government money at all, ever for 15 that part of this. We only took private, you 16 know, RBF and all the other foundations.

17 Now, in these countries Hungary and 18 Poland are a problem. But the children have 19 taken to the streets in Slovakia and in the Czech 20 republic and are demanding that there be 21 anticorruption laws, that there be rule of law.
22 They are demanding that there be civic education

1 in those countries. They don't remember '89.
2 It's long ago. It's two generations ago but they 3 are demanding and Zuzana Caputova, a young woman 4 who headed up (inaudible) international in 5 Slovakia is now the new president.
6 So it is -- there is some optimism on 7 all of this that can happen. But my former 8 offices are now the leading NGOs and one of the 9 main things that they are focusing on is civic 10 education. Because they know that this is a not 11 being taught in the schools in any of these 12 countries. And they can't just rule by 13 demonstrations, they have to understand, so 14 that's a little of the history, the combination 15 of the great fun we all had doing it. The role 16 that CEELI played was absolutely, totally 17 important, and crucial in that part of the world
18 and the importance of civic education.
19 MS. CARLE: Thank you very much for 20 that. I saw so many hands and know people have a 21 lot to say, and a lot to talk about but I have 22 gotten the sign that it's time to go to the

1 front during the reception. Please sign it,
2 don't feel bad. I signed it, others have signed 3 it so please sign it. Thank you very much and 4 please enjoy the reception.
5 MS. CARLE: And thank you for not --

1 reception. And I hope all of this conversation 2 can continue during the reception that will be 3 right outside the building.
4 Thank you. A big hand for our panel.
5
6 MR. LAGUARDA: I have to say two things
7 before you go to the reception. The first is 8 despite what you might think this entire day was 9 not Herman's idea. Actually, not surprisingly it
10 was the idea of my colleague Professor Macarena
11 Saez, so please give her a round of applause.
12 Okay. Then I copied the idea. And if 13 you are inspired by what you heard, especially 14 about civic education we hope you will be 15 inspired to buy the book of a selection of 16 Herman's work for sale in the lobby during the 17 reception. One hundred percent of the proceeds, 18 and you can donate more, go to support one of 19 Herman's favorite causes, the Marshall Brennan
20 Constitutional Literacy Project here at AUWCL.
21 So please be generous and it's a wonderful book.
22 And please sign the poster that is out
